W. M. S. CONVENTION

The eighteenth annual convention of the W. M. S. of the Napanee district convened in the beautiful new Methodist Church at Odessa, Friday, October 11th, 1912.

The morning session was opened with Bible reading and prayer by the pastor, Rev. S. T. Tucker, after which he extended a warm welcome to the delegates and visitors.

Mrs. William Valteau, District Organizer, then presided with Mrs. G. I. Perry as Secretary.

Appointments followed: Press Reporter, Mrs. Edward Kaylor; Courtesy Committee, Mrs. Madill, Napanee, and Mrs. P. Detlor, Hawley.

There was a pleasing feature just here when Mrs. E. A. Gibson, ex-district organizer, was made a member with all the privileges of the convention.

Reports of Auxiliaries, Circles and Bands were then asked for and all showed increased interest. Ten auxiliaries reported having raised $366 since May 1st and nearly all having some definite plan of work for the year. Canvassing and personal work for securing new members were also noticed.

The reports from circles and bands were very encouraging.

The girls of to-day are the women of tomorrow. From the bands must come the women who will feel the same responsibility that we have felt. The distinctive work of the Band is educational.

Then came reports from Superintendents of Cradle Rolls, Associate Helpers and Systematic and Proportionate Giving. We have in the District, 35 Cradle Roll members, 51 Associate Helpers, and 10 Auxiliaries have Superintendents on Systematic and Proportionate Giving.

Miss Florence Valteau, Catarqui, then rendered beautifully the solo, "My Task," after which Mrs. Hudgins, of Selby, gave an instructive paper on the Auxiliary and the Laymen's Missionary Movement. This movement measures its success not merely by the financial results which it attains, but more by its success in getting the men of the church to consecrate a fair portion of their time, thought and effort to the spreading of christian civilization.

The object of the W. M. S. is to engage the efforts of christian women in the evangelization of heathen women and children. While the work of these two societies are under distinct management, they are in the closest sympathy and co-operation with each other, both in the administration at home and in the work on the mission fields.

Odessa Sunday School Orchestra then gave an excellent selection.

Business—Mrs. Valteau tendered her resignation and Mrs. M. S. Madole, Napanee, was elected District Organizer and Mrs. G. I. Perry, Moven, District Secretary.

Mrs. (Rev.) S. T. Tucker heartily welcomed the convention to Odessa and spoke of the benefits derived from then gave an excellent selection.

Business—Mrs. Valteau tendered her resignation and Mrs. M. S. Madole, Napanee, was elected District Organizer and Mrs. G. I. Perry, Moven, District Secretary.

Mrs. (Rev.) S. T. Tucker heartily welcomed the convention to Odessa and spoke of the benefits derived from such a gathering. The discussions and addresses as leaving a strong educational and inspirational influence upon all who attend.

Mrs. Bruce Robertson, Sillsville, replied, and speaking of our work she said we, as a society, never had so many problems and responsibilities confronting us as to-day, never greater need for workers in our auxiliaries. The question then arises, What can we as members do? It is not what we are willing to do, it is not what we would like to do, but what can each one of us do if put into action. Could we not be more faithful in our auxiliaries. Could we not put forth an effort to attend our meetings more regularly and those of us who do attend the meetings and know the work, let us not shirk our responsibilities, our own share of the work when asked to take part, if we want to progress. How we would grow and advance if no one shirked and each one worked to help the other. Individual faithfulness on the part of both officers and members cannot fail to build up a society full of activity and enthusiasm. The more we can reach out and help others, the more we feel that we are responsible for the work, the more will be our reward and the nearer we will come to that portion of scripture which says "She hath done what she could."

In conducting the consecration service Mrs. M. E. A. Gibson gave a Bible reading from Philipians 3, 1-14, and emphasised our fellowship with Christ through suffering. Prayer by Mrs. E. Kayler and Mrs. Thos. Gibbard, after which many spoke of the blessings they had received since becoming members of the W. M. S.

An excellent paper was then given by Miss Harriet Wartman, Bath, "The Auxiliary and the Ladies Aid." She said if one but stopped to think why the different church organizations exist, it is for the one purpose—the betterment of humanity—it is for the making of this world better, making it more Christ like. There are many ways that this can be done, and each organization works along its own line with the one object in view.

A motion song by eight Odessa girls "Little things have wondrous power," was sweetly rendered and was so in keeping with the remarks of our organizer during the morning session, urging us to be faithful and not despise the little things.

Mrs. Greene, Napanee, led a discussion on the W. M. S. and the W. C. T. U. The W. C. T. U. reads aright the needs of the day when it creates a department of missions. Likewise the W. M. S., alive to its purpose and opportunity will be intimately associated in the temperance movement and these two great organizations created and operated by the christian women of the land and all for one common end. What more natural and logical than that the interests of one should be the interest of the other and that every woman of the W. M. S. should be a member of the W. C. T. U., and every woman of the W. C. T. U. a member of the W. M. S.

Miss Florence Valteau again delighted her hearers with a solo, "Hold Thou my hand."

from the scrap books kept by Thomas W. Casey. These were all written by Mr. C. local topics and they are ably ed by Mr. W. S. Herrington who has also written a short tion. The volume has a coindex. A copy of it is given member of the Lennox and A Historical Society but for a price is 25 cents or if sent by cents. The first three volumes published by the Society have great demand and the issue of it is nearly exhausted.

During the summer many additions have been made to the collection of historical material.

The National Battlefield Commission presented the Society with a bronze medal to commemorate the founding of Quebec by Cl Mr. John Stevenson added previous gift 22 volumes dealing the history of Canada and the history of this County.

Other important presents have been made by Dr. Wilfrid bell, The State Historical Society, Wisconsin, Mr. James P. H. Neil B. Matthewson, Mr. Davern, Mrs. Wm. J. Young C. Bogart, Mr. G. R. Fin Bureau of American Ethnology Mrs. R. A. Leonard.

Mrs. Leonard's gift included photographs of Wm. Charles James, Hon. John S. and Augustus Hooper.

Everyone in this county is interested in this collection of numbers about fifteen thousand articles. The distinguished persons who attended the Anniversary of the Ontario Historical Society held here in June, were unanimous in their praise of the collection made. Anyone having books, newspapers or any historic interest should add the collection either as a gift thus helping to make it more. The name of each one who gives the case of a loan the name lender is carefully kept in especially for that purpose.

The Lennox and Addington Historical Society has had five successful years in collecting and during these years has the public thirty-eight free lectures in addition to those provided at meeting of the parent organization. THE CENTENARY OF QUEENSTON HEIGHTS

The Patriotic address given in Grace Methodist Church, on Sunday, by Rev. Mr. Wilson, on "The Centenary of Queenston Heights," (having special reference to Brock) was listened to with much attention by the large congregation. It was a splendid preliminary to the address of Rev. Mr. Woodsworth in the evening.

Mr. Wilson gave a sketch of the causes of the war of 1812 and the events leading up to the memorable battle of Queenston Heights on the 13th of October, 1812. The celebrated Indian Chief, Tecumseh, whose remarkable military abilities attracted the attention of Brock, was recognized as an important part of the great struggle. The patriotism and valor of the Canadians were fully demonstrated in the heroic defense of home and native land. The British were exonerated from all blame for the declaration of hostilities.

With the aid of a few regulars the citizen soldiers of Canada defended 1500 miles of territory, repulsed large invading armies and not only kept the flag flying and held their own, but acquired large tracts of the enemies territory.

Queenston Heights, tho' a glorious victory, was dearly won by the death of Sir Isaac Brock, at 43 years of age. He was the hero of the Canadian people; and he won the hearts of both the white settlers and the Indians. When buried at Fort George, the half-mast flags and minute-guns of the British and American forts testified the honor and esteem in which he was held by friend and foe alike.

A grateful country has erected a splendid monument to the beloved and honored Brock. He was a kind, Christian gentleman, with a pure, clean reputation and high character, as well as a gallant soldier. Sir Isaac Brock may well be held up before Canadian youth as an example of loyalty and patriotism.

The heritage those men left, now taking their last sleep wrapped in their blankets, is ours. We must defend our shores. It would be an eternal disgrace to Canada not to be able to repel invasion—300 settlers defended 1000 miles of territory against eight millions, this should teach our people a great lesson. Ours to day is not so much military as moral defense. To keep the land for Britain, i. e., with British ideals, for Christ and an open way into Public Schools and an open Bible. The foundations of a christian civilization must not only be laid firm and deep, but must be laid now. The future lies in the present and this present is burdened with responsibilities for patriots and freedom loving citizens. The foreign factor is here. Shall he mould our future, or shall we fashion these people into intelligent, honest citizens of the Empire.

ODESSA.

The fourteenth annual convention of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Lennox district, was held on Friday, October 11th. The service was provided by the ladies, about 300 sat down, after which a prayer was given. At 9.30 in the evening the meeting was opened by Mrs. Tucker, of Odessa. Reports were given by those in the different branches. The service was given by Mrs. Ker and was replied to by Mrs. Robinson. In the afternoon a consecration service was held conducted by Mrs. E. A. Finlay of Napanee. The address on "Ladies Aid," was given by Miss W. Ball of Bath. The address on "China's New Year," was given by Mrs. Andrew Hawley auxiliary, and the address on "W.M.S. and W.C.T.U. in Canada," by Mrs. of Grace Church auxiliary. A musical programme was given which consisted of a chorus by the Odessa girls, a solo by Miss Vallean, of Cataraqui; and Mrs. Henry Smith, of the Odessa auxiliary.

and this present is burdened with responsibilities for patriots and freedom loving citizens. The foreign factor is here. Shall he mould our future, or shall we fashion these people into intelligent, honest citizens of the Empire.

In the evening Rev. James Woodsworth of All Peoples Mission, Winnipeg, an old friend of the pastor, gave a splendid address, following up the closing sentences of the morning address of Mr. Wilson. Mr. Woodsworth is an earnest and charming speaker. He held the very large congregation for an hour in wrapped attention with chart and maps, telling wonderful stories of peoples, tongues, creeds and numbers, information was given in a way that cannot easily be forgotten. The company of young men and women, who listened to Mr. Woodsworth Sunday night, must have caught a vision never seen before, and must look over the great responsibilities, burdens and opportunity from a different viewpoint. They must see that the greatest century of the world's history is here. Mr. Woodsworth is full of his theme, his impassioned address, as he appeals for the foreign immigrant of the great west is most impressive, and his eloquent periods more than holds the attention of his audience.

The tour of Mr. Woodsworth through Ontario will no doubt arouse a deep interest in the spiritual condition of the west.

It will lead the young men and women to greater consecration for the good of others.

Another visit from this gifted preacher and author will be welcomed by the people of Napanee.

Mr. Woodsworth addressed the Sunday school during the school hour.

WOUNDED BY LUNATIC

Theodore Roosevelt Is in Serious Condition at Milwaukee.

John Schrank, a Deranged New Yorker, Stands Near Automobile and Fires Point Blank at Progressive Leader—Roosevelt Insisted on Making His Speech as Scheduled Before Being Taken to the Hospital.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 15.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was shot and wounded last night as he was leaving the Gilpatrick Hotel for the Auditorium to make a speech. The colonel went on to the hall and began his speech, after he had seen the assailant arrested and taken to the police station.

The man was seized and held until policemen came up. A mob surged around the prisoner, who apparently is mentally upset on the subject of Roosevelt's running for another term as President.

The man, who is small of stature, admitted firing the shot, and said that "Any man looking for a third term ought to be shot."

In notes found in the man's pockets at the police station were statements that the man had been visited in a dream by the spirit of William McKinley, who said, indicating Roosevelt: "This is my murderer. Avenge my death!"

It was believed Roosevelt's injury was not serious. The colonel felt no pain at the time the shot was fired, and was not aware that he was shot until he was on his way to the Auditorium. His attention was then called to a hole in his overcoat, and he found that his shirt was soaked with blood. He insisted that he was not hurt badly. A superficial examination of the wound was made when he reached the Auditorium, and three physicians agreed that he was in no immediate danger.

Col. Roosevelt's life probably was saved by a manuscript of the speech which he delivered last night. The bullet struck the manuscript, which retarded its force as it passed through

The doctors stated later at night that the bullet penetrated three inches of the abdominal wall and the wound is more serious than at first thought. This was shown by the X-ray photograph. Col. Roosevelt is still at the station in Milwaukee.

which delivered last night. The bullet struck the manuscript, which retarded its force as it passed through into the flesh.

His assailant was prevented from firing a second shot by Albert H. Martin, one of Col. Roosevelt's two secretaries. Col. Roosevelt had just stepped into an automobile when the would-be assassin pushed his way through the crowd in the street and fired. Martin, who was standing in the car with the colonel, leaped on to the man's shoulders and bore him to the ground.

Capt. A. O. Girard of Milwaukee, who was on the front seat, jumped almost at the same time, and in an instant the man was overpowered and disarmed.

A wild cry of "Lynch him!" went up. Col. Roosevelt spoke to the people and told them to spare the man, who then was taken into the hotel and held there until he was removed to the police station.

In spite of the entreaties of physi- cians, Col. Roosevelt insisted on de- livering his address.

"I will make this speech or die, one or the other," he said.

Henry F. Cochems, one of the Wis- consin Progressive leaders, told the great crowd which had assembled in the auditorium that Col. Roosevelt had been shot, and asked the people to be calm. The crowd was thrown al- most into a panic by the announce- ment, but Col. Roosevelt calmed the people by rising and assuring them that he was not badly hurt. Then he began his address. Several times he seemed to be growing weak and mem- bers of his party rose to help him. He motioned them to sit down.

"Let me alone. I'm all right," he said.

The shooting took place in the street in front of the Hotel Gilpatrick. Col. Roosevelt reached Milwaukee shortly after 5 o'clock, and making his way through the crowd which had gathered at the station, entered an automobile and was driven to the hotel. He took dinner in a private dining- room on the main floor with the mem- bers of the party on his private car.

After dinner Col. Roosevelt went to his room on the second floor of the hotel, and shortly before eight o'clock he started for the auditorium. His automobile stood in front of the door and about it was a big crowd, wait- ing to catch a glimpse of the colonel as he started off.

With the colonel was Philip Roose- velt, a young cousin; Mr. Cochems, Mr. Martin and Capt. Girard. The cr- wd pressed close about the colonel and gave a cheer as he appeared. As the party approached the automobile Col. Roosevelt's companions stood aside as he stepped into the car. Mar- tin entered directly behind him and sat on the further side of the car.

Col. Roosevelt stood up, waving his hat in answer to the cheers of the crowd. The assassin was standing in the crowd, a foot from the automo- bile. He pushed his way to the side of the car, and, raising his gun, fired.

Martin caught the flash and leaped over the car a second after the bullet sped on its way.

Col. Roosevelt barely moved as the shot was fired. Before the crowd knew what had happened Martin, who is six feet tall and a former football player, had landed squarely on the would-be assassin's shoulders and had borne him to the ground. He threw his right arm about the man's neck with a death-like grip and with his left arm seized the hand that held the re- volver. In another second he had dis- armed him.

to my place to eat and appeared to be getting the launch ready for some kind of a cruise. When they came back later, I noticed the launch's name had been changed to Peerless. The men asked me for some green paint, which I gave them. Later I noticed something about five feet long covered with canvas tipping at the end of the boat, and while they were turning around, I yelled 'Say, fellows, be careful or you will lose that pack- age.' It appeared to be tipping into the water. They made it snug and that was the last I saw of them."

The canvas which the witness said he saw on the launch, was declared to be the same as that found later in a house which McNamara rented in San Francisco, and in which a quantity of nitro-gelatine was found.

The testimony of most of yesterday's witnesses was confined to identifying letters, the contents of which are to be made known later.

Grand Trunk Changes.

Toronto, Oct. 15.—Announcement was made by the Grand Trunk Rail- way yesterday that U. E. Gillen, su- perintendent of the middle division of the G.T.R., whose headquarters are in Toronto, has been transferred to Mont- real as superintendent of the eastern division, and that H. E. Whitenbur- division, 4/qzCa. E,lof...5wym ,EL78 ger, superintendent at Montreal, is to become superintendent of the mid- dle division here, the change to come into effect at once. It is understood that the change is in accordance with a plan whereby three general super- intendents are to be appointed, one in Montreal, one in Toronto, and one in Detroit. The men to be thus ap- pointed are Messrs. Gillen, Whitten- burger and Cunningham of Detroit. The title of general superintendent will not be given them until January, 1913. Each of these general superin- tendents will have full charge of their districts and report to Vice-President Kelly.

Nature's Way Is The Best.

Buried deep in our American forest we find bloodroot, queen's root, man-drake and stone root, golden seal, Oregon grape root and cherrybark. Of these Dr. R. V. Pierce made a pure glyceric extract which has been favorably known for over forty years. He called it "Golden Medical Discovery."

This "Discovery" purifies the blood and tones up the stomach and the entire system in Nature's own way. It's just the tissue builder and tonic you require when recovering from a hard cold, grip, or pneumonia. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body. The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience at this time of the year is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; it is often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes thin—you feel "blue."

"More than a week ago I was suffering with an awful cold in my head, throat, breast, and body," writes Mr. JAMES G. KENT, of 710 L Street, S. E., Washington, D. C. "Some called it La Grippe, some pneumonia. I was advised by a friend to try a bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I tried a bottle and it did me so much good that I feel safe in saying it is the greatest and best medicine that I ever took. My health is much better than it was before using your medicine. It does all you claim for it and is satisfactory."

TRAINING PARROTS.

How They Are Taught by London Dealers to Talk.

There is a good deal of individuality about the parrot, to whatever tribe he may belong. The grey parrot from the West Coast of Africa and Prince's Island is supposed to be the best talker, but the Indian bird, although perhaps not so clear of speech, is often quite as clever.

A writer in London Ideas recently had an interview with a dealer in parrots of every known species. By judicious education, he said, a parrot of almost any kind, from the tiny budgerigar to the gigantic macaw, might be converted into a talker.

"My method?" he repeated. "Well, they are simple enough. I allow my parrots some proportion of their native food—bananas, palm, nuts and the like. I begin by instructing them to pronounce one word, allowing them two days to master it, and gradually increasing their vocabulary to three or four words. I then make sentences of words that are easily joined together. It takes a male bird at most two weeks to master half a dozen short sentences in one language. The females are not quite so quick.

"In teaching a parrot, an important secret is to demonstrate the meaning of the word or sentence if possible, so that it will seem to speak intelligently. For instance, pulling a newspaper from my pocket, I will say, 'What's the time?' The parrot will soon learn to suit the word to the action.

"In teaching the bird to greet a visitor with 'How d'you do,' I repeat the words on entering its presence. To make him say 'Must you go?' 'Good-bye,' I rise from a chair, pick up my hat, and while leaving the room repeat the words.

"There are birds that can quote from the classics or from the works of some of our best known authors. These command exceedingly high prices. One that I taught to speak several phrases from Shakespeare and Dickens, I sold to a literary man for $100. The bird was of the common black cockatoo species.

"Parrots are admirable imitators. I had a parrot once that could give an exact imitation of Dan Leno's voice, and crack several of his short jokes. A clever amateur actor, who is a pretty good mimic, taught the bird. It took him about four months, but his patience was well rewarded. A well known actor heard of the bird from a member of his company, and

LEGENDS OF SACRED BELLS.

If Stolen They Return to Their Own Home, Ringing All the Way.

Solemn ceremonies precede the dedicating of bells for sacred purposes, according to a form prescribed in the Pontifical called "the blessing of a bell," though the popular term, "the baptism of a bell," was used as early as the eleventh century. Only a bishop can bless or baptize a bell.

The oil used is the oleum infirmorum for the outside of the bell and the oil of chrism for the inside. The bishop prays repeatedly that the sound of the bell may avail to summon the faithful, that it may excite their devotion, drive away storms and terrify evil spirits. Bells being consecrated cannot be rung without the consent of the ecclesiastical authorities. Each bell receives a special name and has its own sponsor.

There are numerous legends that consecrated bells would, if stolen, return to their own home, ringing all the way. Of an Irish bell in Leinster it is related that when a chieftain of Wicklow had obtained possession of it, he had to tie it up to prevent its escaping to St. Fillan's Church in Meath, where it usually abode. A like tale is told of the bell of St. Illfyd, which had been stolen by a king.

"The king was destroyed, but, repenting before his death, he ordered the bell to be restored to its place in Wales. Without waiting to be driven the horse, with the bell about his neck, set out for Wales, followed by a whole drove of horses, drawn by the melodious sound of the bell. The horse was even able to cross the River Severn and make its entry into Wales, the other horses following. Then hastening along the shore, over the mountains and through the woods, it finally reached the banks of the River Taf, where a clergyman, hearing the sweet sound of the bell, went out to meet the horse and helped in carrying the bell to the gate of St. Illfyd's Church."

Among the records of other stolen bells is that of one from Soissons in Burgundy, which Clothaire carried away. The bell objected to the act by gradually becoming dumb on the journey to Paris, where its voice was discovered to be gone. But its voice returned in such full force when the bell was sent home that its tone could be heard seven miles distant.

In the year 1541 Arthur Bulkley, bishop of Bangor, sacrilegiously sold the first five bells belonging to the cathedral and went to the seaside to Sydney Post—The east is peculiarly adapted to mixed farming, and with the big cash market near at hand in Sydney and the other towns our farmers should soon be on easy street if they pursue the most approved methods of agriculture.

London Free Press—At the same time it behoves the Railway Commission to look closely into the whole situation, and to see to it that the people, and particularly the Western Provinces, are protected from the imposition of freight rates that are not justifiable.

Kingston Whig—"Heaven is my witness that what I have done I did for the good of Canada, and my duty as a loyal Canadian and British subject, and I would do it over again," are the significant words of Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the closing meeting of his tour in Ontario.

Calgary Albertan—It the people of western Canada who are most interested in the campaign for wider markets are not very active in the fight, the tariff wall in Canada instead of being lowered will be raised. The Canadian manufacturers say they were merely waiting for the opportunity of starting a campaign for higher tariff, such as they waged unsuccessfully a few years ago.

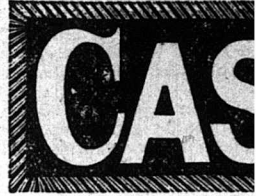

St. Thomas Journal—The British preference is the most tangible expression yet given of Canada's loyalty to the motherland, and it is worth remembering that it was given by the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, despite the protests of the manufacturers, who, with the banking interests of Canada, are the loudest proclaimers of loyalty within the Conservative ranks—the kind of loyalty that costs little or nothing.

Montreal Gazette—The protest against the new regulations for the bilingual schools of Ontario is being supported in many of the sections in the northern part of the Province, and promises to be productive of both educational and political mischief. Perhaps the Government, in making the regulations, paid too much heed to what its enemies were saying with the purpose of causing it trouble, and not enough to what was suggested by experience as the best way of solving a difficult problem.

Hamilton Spectator—Iron and steel are about the same in price on both sides of the Atlantic, but in turning such iron and steel into finished product, what if Canada would have to pay twice as much on the labor cost in Canada as in Great Britain? Would it not be the part of common sense to get the work done where it can be done cheapest, unless we are very sure that eventually it will pay to raise up in this country an entirely new industry?

A well known actor heard of the bird from a member of his company, and bought it for $150. Most actors have a liking for parrots, particularly for the good mimics. Miss Gertie Millar has a fine collection of them.

"Large retail business houses and manufacturing firms are also good customers. I sell them what I call my advertising parrots. I have sold to several tobaccoists parrots that I have taught to say, 'Sit down for a smoke,' 'Try So-and-So's cigar,' and the like. Others I have taught to puff certain well known foodstuffs for some of the food manufacturing concerns, who lend the parrots out to the shops that sell their speciality."

Where the Danger Lay.

An English clergyman says that when he came to a certain place as vicar he asked whether there were any sick to be visited.

"Oh, no, sir!" was the answer. "Nobody is ever ill in Berryarbor. There is an old man, to be sure, over ninety, who has taken lately to his bed, but there hain't much the matter with him that I know of."

"I thought to myself," added the vicar, "of the story of the Scotchman who said to his doctor:

"Ye pu' a vera long face, doctor. D'ye think I'm dangerously ill?"

"Na, na," was the reply. "I don't think ye're dangerously ill, but I think ye're dangerously old."

Linnaeus and His Works.

How much sleep do men need? Jeremy Taylor was content with three hours. Baxter with four Wesley with six. Bismarck and Gladstone needed eight, but Goethe, Napoleon, Mr. Abeau and Humboldt professed that 'they could get along very well with less. Linnaeus, the naturalist, was one of those who robbed themselves of sleep during their earlier years and made up for it later in life. In his wakeful periods during his old age he would retire to his library, take down one of his own works and read it with a sigh of regret. "How very fine!" he would murmur. "What would I not have given to be able to write a book like this!"

Hanged and Tarred.

An English custom of not so long ago was to hang smugglers on gibbets arranged along the coasts and then tar the bodies that they might be preserved a long while as a warning to other culprits. As late as 1822 three men thus varnished could have been seen hanging before Dover Castle. Sometimes the process was extended to robbers, assassins, incendiaries and other criminals. John Painter, who fired the dockyard at Portsmouth, was first hanged and then tarred in 1776. From time to time he was given a fresh coat of varnish and thus was made to last nearly fourteen years. The weird custom did not stop smuggling or other crimes.

bell was sent home that its tone could be heard seven miles distant.

In the year 1541 Arthur Bulkley, bishop of Bangor, sacrilegiously sold the first five bells belonging to the cathedral and went to the seaside to see them shipped away; but at that instant he was stricken blind and so remained to the day of his death.

Any sacrilege or profanation of bells, so sacredly blessed and set apart for holy purposes, seems to have met with punishment. Forrabury Church in Cornwall has a tower, often termed the Silent Tower of Botreux, because it has no bells. The reason for the absence of bells, as given by Hunt in his Popular Romances of the West of England, is as follows:

"Some years ago the Forrabury parishioners wanted to have a peal of bells which would equal those of the church of Tintagel, not far off. The bells were cast, blessed with the usual rites, then sent off to Forrabury; but as the vessel, after making a good voyage, neared the northern part of the Cornish coast, the pilot heard the vesper bells of Tintagel and thanked God for his quick and safe journey.

"This act of piety caused the captain to laugh and swear that the safe voyage was due to his own skill as a captain as well as that of his men, and not to what he termed the pilot's superstitious prayer. While yet employed in swearing and cursing the ocean swelled suddenly, and rolling toward the land overwhelmed everything in its course. As the ship sank muffled bells were heard tolling, and now when storms are coming the sound can be heard under the waves."

A "Japanese" Garden.

At his country seat at Gunnersbury Mr Leopold Rothschild, who is an enthusiastic amateur gardener, has a wonderful display of gardening in which the Japanese garden, prepared with enormous care and expense, is his especial pride. For this reason, when on one occasion he had been entertaining the Japanese Ambassador to lunch and was conducting his guest round his gardens, he kept it to the last, says The Manchester Guardian. The ambassador admired greenhouses and gardens, and at last, after careful preparation, the Japanese garden was, so to speak, 'burst open before him.' He held up his hands with enthusiasm. "Ah!" he said, "wonderful, wonderful—we have nothing like this in Japan."

Edmonton Journal—Those who talk of abolishing this right of appeal because in some cases the Judicial Committee has found against Canadian municipalities are striking at the very foundation of our form of government. It is not the business of courts to rid public bodies of the consequences of their mistakes, as some people would apparently have us believe. They exist to enforce the law as it stands, and it because this body at the heart of the Empire is less likely to be disturbed by popular clamor and to dispense simple justice than some of our own courts under certain circumstances that it has such value.

Sudbury Star—If Conservation wishes to emphasize Canada's—i.e., Sudbury's—supreme importance as a nickel producer, all well and good, but surely the suggestion of the prohibition of nickel export as a factor in obviating "Armageddon" is chimerical and absurd. It would be just as reasonable to talk of prohibiting the export of wheat, corn or any other commodity without which armies would be powerless in the field, inasmuch as Napoleon's dictum that "an army crawls on its stomach" applies with the same force now as in the days of Waterloo and Leipsic.

Sydney Post—When will men realize that the franchise imposes a solemn obligation? What means can be taken to make men do their duty? Some stay away from the polls because, as they say, they do not wish to get into the mire of politics. Miserable cowards, the whole of them! That is the reason there is mire in politics. Others stay away because they do not take sufficient interest in public matters to make up their minds. These are not good citizens. There may be some who are bribed to refrain from voting. These are distinctly bad citizens. They are profane persons, like Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright.

Windsor Record—Adopting a "holier-than-thou" attitude, The Toronto Mail and Empire proceeds to lecture The Toronto Globe in this fashion: "The Globe ought to be ashamed of its efforts to make political capital for Sir Wilfrid out of the fact that he is a Roman Catholic. Its attempt to create the impression that Protestants in the Province voted against him because of religious prejudice shocks all good citizen." If one could feel reasonably sure of the sincerity of The Mail's comment, there might be hope for final emancipation from the bonds of prejudice that this paper helped to weave. During the life of Laurier Government, especially just preceding the last Federal election, there was no paper in Canada that sought to stir up religious prejudice more than The Mail. Now that Laurier has been ousted and the Borden Government holds sway. The Mail would lead us to suppose that it had been converted and that it now frowns upon religious prejudice in politics. Until The Mail is able to prove to us that it intends to lead a better life there will remain doubts of its true repentance. "By their works ye shall know them."

TARPON FISHING.

Report In the West Indies is Growing In Popularity.

It is made by Mr. F. G. the "West India Committee" to patriotic English anglers for big game of the sea, their tarpon and tuna under Jack, instead of spending money abroad at the rate of a shilling. He points out that tarpon of large size are to be found in the Milk River and Black Jamaica, particularly after the best bait being a small red herring, locally known as "bait."

Tarpon fishing is grand sport, for one, do not propose to the delights. At the same time, for the use of elaborate tackle—a complete out-

Cold Blooded Betting.

The extreme callousness of the old English gamblers—or gentlemen, as they were then called—is illustrated by the following account which Horace Walpole, the celebrated letter writer, gives of a curious occurrence at White's coffee house in London. In one of his epistles to Sir Horace Mann, under date of Sept. 1, 1750, he says: "They have put into the papers a good story, made at White's. A man dropped down dead at the door and was carried in. The club immediately made bets whether he was dead or not, and when they were going to bleed him the wagers for his death interposed and said it would affect the fairness of the bet, and they stopped their efforts."

A LUCKY PROPHET.

Remarkable Reception to a Remarkable Irishman by His Own People.

A reception remarkable for its novelty and warmth was recently tendered Sir Roger Casement, whose investigation into the horrors connected with the rubber traffic on the Upper Amazon have created such a sensation, on the occasion of his return after an absence of eight years to his native place. Tawin, County Galway, Ireland.

Sir Roger, who is at present consul-general at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, has had a most distinguished career in the diplomatic service. He has been British representative in the Portuguese West African colonies and at Para, and has been sent on several important confidential missions which he discharged so successfully that his promotion has been rapid and last year the honor of knighthood was conferred upon him.

This distinguished diplomat is intensely Irish. Proud as he is of being a citizen and a faithful servant of the great British Empire he is, like many another worthy upholder of the honor and dignity of the Anglo-Celtic race, still more proud to be an Irishman. In recent letters to the Irish press on the possibility of developing Irish trade with Brazil, he has signed himself as "British and Irish Consul." He is an enthusiastic worker in what is known as the Irish Revival Movement having for its object the cultivation of the Irish language and literature and the encouragement of Irish industries. Tawin is one of the most Irish-speaking districts in Ireland and here a summer school for the teaching of the spoken language was established some years ago and is filled during the season with people from the cities who come to improve themselves in the native tongue amidst the beautiful surroundings of one of the loveliest spots on the west coast of Ireland.

Of this school Sir Roger has been a hearty patron since its inception and he has also done much to encourage the now flourishing cottage industries of the locality.

The railway does not go to Tawin but stops at Oranmore, about five miles away, and here Sir Roger and his party were met by a big procession of jaunting cars and men on horseback, headed by a number of pipers, also on horseback. By this cavalcade he was escorted to Tawin which was en fete for the occasion. Arches of evergreens spanned the roadway at intervals and appropriate welcoming mottoes were suspended at vantage points. Every man, woman, and child in Tawin who had not gone to the railway station turned out to receive the procession at the entrance to the village, and loud were the cheers given in honor of the visitors.

Addresses of welcome were read to which Sir Roger replied, counselling the people to respect and cultivate their native tongue and congratulated them on the improvements that had been effected in the village during his absence.

In the evening all the houses were illuminated and bonfires were lighted on various points along the sea-shore. Next evening the fourth session of the summer school was opened and the illuminations were continued. The occasion was marked by a grand festival of music, song and dance, the principal item of which was dance to the music of the pipes in which none but couples over seventy years of age participated. Another interesting item was a tug-of-war between a team of islanders and a team chosen from the students and visitors.

At the close Sir Roger Casement announced a scheme of prizes he had prepared for distribution at the end of the school term.

Alabaster Sphinx Found.

Another sphinx, weighing 90 tons and carved from a single block of alabaster, has been unearthed at a point between the world-famed Colossi on the water-logged plains of Memphis in Egypt. For hundreds of years it has lain in a recumbent position buried beneath the sands on the road to Sakkareh. To-day it is half exposed to view and next year it is to be raised to a vertical position above the water line.

This newly found sphinx was betrayed in its hiding place by its tail, which Mr. Mackay, one of the students of the British school in Egypt, discovered about a year ago. This year when the water on the plain subsided the complete figure was excavated and was found to measure some 14 feet high and 26 feet in length. Alabaster being a rock foreign to the neighborhood, the new sphinx ranks as the largest that has ever been transported. The figure bears no inscription, but it is considered by Prof. Flinders Petrie, the director of the British school in Egypt, to have been carved about 1300 B. C.

Dugong Oil.

A Queensland correspondent writes referring to an article in "Lloyd's News" in which two doctors stated that they had found school children with brown paper soaked in goose grease next the chest as a protection against or cure for colds, etc. Without expressing any opinion upon the efficacy or otherwise of goose grease, our correspondent points out that the oil of the dugong (sea-cow) has a great reputation in Australia as a healing agent in cases of consumption, burns, paralysis, insomnia, etc. The oil is laid on a pad, applied to the skin, and "the consumptive sucks it in in no time."

Queen Bess' Giant.

Queen Elizabeth had a Flemish porter who was over eight feet high and of great strength, and he was an extremely good-natured man. Whenever he met any one who was abnormally tall he used to patronize him in a friendly sort of way, and on one occasion when he met at an inn two soldiers who were over six feet in height he said, "Come under my arms, my little children." And taking them up, he walked down the room with them under his arms as if they had been children, much to their disgust.

upon fishing is grand sport, I, for one, do not propose to the delights. At the same time, for the use of elaborate tackle—a complete outfit—fishing could not be bought for $100—and both on this and because of its somewhat demand on the muscles, it is everybody's choice. There are many other fishes in those waters, but fully as game for the angler, and of these I think that the fish and cavally (the latter being a Trinidad by the old French name) are perhaps the most desirable.

Both grow to a weight of thirty pounds, and fight ten hooked on light tackle. The acouta is another typically Caribbean fish that I have encountered in Bridgetown to Montego Bay. It is a large barbel, eight or ten feet in length, and of considerable diversion, but, I have found these fish far more easily than most of their size and strength. The angler cares for sea fish—usual objection, on the score of mess, need not be held of account in this part of the world, as the normal mood of the fish is one of peace, and even in weather smooth water can be found on one side or other of the island. Yet, even with the aid of calm seas, there are enemies who will fish only in rivers, these Jamaica catfish, at any rate, worthy game in the various streams. The little mountain mullet is rarely caught over land, takes fly, grasshopper, Stewart tackle, Devon minnow, even a morsel of avocado is a fragile little fellow, apt to eat; but those who nothing heavier and more something, in fact, appear more closely the sleek and sleek of our own seas, should attention to the allied calico-hog-nosed mullet, both of which grow to at least 10 pounds. These may be caught with soft bait, and even on a hook wrapped in weed, and very few have been taken close to town. A judicious close enforcement on the rivers before and October, inclusive, of fishing may be enjoyed in the winter tourist season.

AIRMAN IS TRIUMPHANT THE PLOWING

AVIATOR CODY FULFILLS TESTS OF BRITISH WAR OFFICE.

Intrepid Inventor and Birdman Reaps the Reward of Long Hardships and Struggles In Big Competition on Salisbury Plain—Started His Experiments With a Man-Lifting Kite.

After years of painstaking effort, Mr. S. F. Cody, the well-known air pioneer, of Britain, has achieved a notable triumph. His success is the result of the Military Aeroplane Competition held recently on Salisbury Plain. These tests were held with the object of selecting a machine most suitable for war purposes, and they have resulted in an overwhelming victory for Mr. Cody and his big biplane. He has carried off the two chief prizes, and has thus won $25,000 the maximum sum any competitor was allowed to win. Only a month ago Mr. Cody was awarded $25,000 in an arbitration in a dispute with the War Office over his famous war kite.

There were 21 entrants and 32 machines in the tests, and the aeroplanes which entered had to fulfil the following conditions, among others: Carry a live load of 350 pounds, with fuel and oil, for 4-12 hours; fly for three hours with the load and maintain a height of 4,500 feet for one hour, the first 1,000 feet being reached at a rate of 200 feet a minute; attain a speed of 55 miles an hour; rise from long grass, clover, and harrowed land, and descend in plowed land.

Another important condition was that the machines had to be capable of change from flying trim to road transport trim. There was also a quick-assembly test and a flexibility of speed test. Mr. Cody did particularly well in the last-named test, his machine having a range of speed of from 72.6 to 48.5 miles an hour. He

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mr. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—Mrs. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package.

C. A. WISEMAN,

rising from plowed land and in stability tests under all conditions. Briefly telling his life history, Mr. Cody said he was born fifty years ago, the 6th of last March. "I took to kite-flying when quite a boy, and even in those days I was on many occasions lifted from the ground when flying my kite. I made cellular kites, both round and triangular, and of various sizes. During the Boer war I realized that a man-lifting kite would be a valuable asset to the army to replace the captive balloon in windy weather. I set to work to make one and it was eventually agreed by the War Office that I should give an experiment with my new invention. The result was so satisfactory that my services were engaged as chief instructor in kite work and to assist with the instruction in flying machines in general. I went to the balloon factory at South Farnborough, which is now the Royal Aircraft Factory." All England knows about Cody's "aerial bus," or his "flying cathedral," as his big biplane has been nicknamed. Everybody expected a character so picturesque and daring to do plenty of flying at Salisbury. But at the beginning of the competition who thought his "cathedral" would emerge from it as the victor over more than a score of French and British machines? The fact is that Cody has been regarded as a first-rate showman as well as an aviator; his former white suits, his boyish impulsiveness, his jokes, and his frank egotism have been duly noted and memorized, so that they have overshadowed his flying. He has performed gallantly and skillfully with his aeroplanes; but his vivid personal qualities have made the deeper impression on the public mind.

In September, 1909, he flew 30 miles, a British record; and in July, 1911, he was fourth in a $50,000 race of 1,000 miles round Britain. His preference consistently has been for big biplanes. When the "cathedral" was on view at one flying meeting a friend of Cody saw a mighty construction of metal by its side. "What's that?" he asked. "Is it a kitchen range?" "No," said Cody, "it's my engine. Indeed, it's only half—the other half hasn't arrived." At Salisbury Plain Cody was called "Papa" by the pilots. They went to "Papa" for all kinds of advice on aviation. In his sheds at Farnborough he has worked steadily and quietly. He has never had one-twentieth of the capital which is at the disposal of others. Time and again he has been pulled up for lack of money to carry out his ideals. But his fertility of resource has only been quickened. His shed at Farnborough is scarcely large enough to hold the tools of some of the more pretentious builders. His machines have frequently to stand outside his shed while he works inside, and one of his most frequent annoyances is when the cows come in from the field and rub their horns on the outstretched planes.

THE BIG MOCK COURT TRIAL.

Full List of Characters and Other Interesting Particulars.

Since the announcement was made in these columns that a big Mock Court trial was to be held under the auspices of Argyle Lodge No. 212 I. O. O. F., in Brisco Opera House, on Monday evening, October 21st, there has been great curiosity to know "who 'tis."

The secret is going to be let outright here and now, and the public can begin to look forward to the merry event.

No wonder there is deep interest when so important a question is at stake, as to whether the affections of a fair woman shall be trifled with, her tender heart rent asunder and her future blighted, with no redress what-ever.

That this Mock Court Trial will be no light affair will be clearly seen and here comes the list of participants.

His honor the Judge will be—W. S. Herrington, K. C.

Clerk—W. P. Deroche, Esq.

Court Officer—Chief Graham.

Crier—Chas. Vandervoort.

Plaintiff's Attorney—Col. A. V. Newton of Worcester, Mass.

Defendant's Attorney—U. M. Wilson, Esq.

The broken-hearted plaintiff in this highly interesting Breach of Promise suit will be Miss Alice O. Paul and the luckless defendant is John Gordon Hall.

The witnesses will be—Miss B. Dyonne, Miss Norma Shannon, B. M. Black, F. H. Carson and Dr. Cameron Wilson.

The jury will be empanelled if the lawyers do not kill each other before the trial begins will be as follows: A. E. Paul, Jas. Douglas, W. Exley, J. E. Robinson, A. C. Baker, P. M. Graham, F. J. Roblin, E. J. Walters, W. F. Ferguson, Fred Scott, A. Caton and S. Holmes.

Altogether this Mock Court Trial promises to be one of the events of the season, both in the interest attaching to it and in the crowd that will attend.

TOWN COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the town council was called for Monday evening last to transact general business.

Present—Reeve Alexander and Councillors Dickinson, Madill, Denison and Osborne. Mayor W. T. Waller presided.

Mayor Waller explained to the council the absolute necessity of repairing the swing bridge at once.

Moved by Coun. Osborne, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that the Street Committee, together with the Street Commissioner, be empowered to place a new covering on the swing bridge. Carried.

Mayor Waller explained to the council a conversation he had with Mr. H. B. Sherwood in reference to taking care of the water the open drain which crosses Centre street, near the railway crossing. Mr. Sherwood wanted to turn this water into the Centre street sewer now under construction. Mayor Waller had objected, because of the fact that this drain was not intended to take care of surface water, but rather for sewage and drainage of cellars, and then if the town assumed the responsibility of taking care of the water from this open watercourse, they would be under obligation to take care of all other similar drains in the town. At any rate he would not

A MUSTARD POULTICE.

It Raised a Lively Rumpus, and It Didn't Cure the Cold.

Lord Carrington used to be a great practical joker, but he was once the victim of his own reputation. He was at the time stopping at a hotel in Cape Town. In the same hotel were a young couple, and the husband having a bad cold, the wife left her room to obtain for him the solace of a mustard poultice. She left him asleep and, thinking she knew her way, descended the stairs and, procuring a particularly virulent concoction, made her way back to her room. But doors are much alike in hotels, and, seeing one ajar, as she had left her own, she entered. Creeping quietly to the bedside, she saw, as she thought, the form of her sleeping lord and master. Hastily bending over him, she placed the fatal irritant upon his chest.

No sooner had she done so than a movement of the sleeper revealed, to her horror, that she had made a terrible mistake. Too frightened to recapture the incriminating poultice, she fled from the room and, rushing down the passage, discovered her own door and bolted herself in.

It was but a minute and the storm broke. The hotel was in an uproar. The mustard poultice had been placed on the chest of the corpulent, elderly governor-general! The explosion of his wrath, his howls of rage as the mustard did its work, brought servants and manager to his bedside.

The situation did not permit of an explanation. Furious with indignation, he declared himself the victim of a gross joke, and the efforts of the maitre d'hotel to pacify him were in vain. He swore that the practical joker was nobody else than Lord Carrington, and the next day, fuming and indignant, left the place.

So did a very contrite young wife and a husband whose cold was no better.

Rebuilt Family Fortunes.

The career of Lord Leith of Fyvie has been full of romance. Descended from a Scottish family of ancient lineage he found in his early youth that he would be compelled to establish his own fortune, and the manner in which he accomplished this end is typical of the Scotch character.

Entering the navy, as his father had done before him, he soon had an opportunity of seeing active service in the New Zealand war, and at twenty he attained the rank of lieutenant. His ship went from New Zealand to S. n Francisco, and it was there he met and fell in love with the daughter of Mr. Derick A. January, a wealthy ironfounder of St. Louis. The young officer married, left the navy, and entered on a commercial career. He soon made his footing secure, and then came the meeting with Andrew Carnegie. Together these two Scotchmen built up the Steel Trust, and by the time he was forty Mr. Alexander Leith was a wealthy man.

When he had become a millionaire he returned to Scotland and bought back Fyvie Castle, which had belonged to his ancestors. Lord and Lady Leith have had the honor of entertaining the King and Queen, and are very popular in royal circles. There is no heir to the title, for their only son died of enteric fever during the South African war. Thus tragedy has followed on success in Lord Leith's career.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 14.—There was an active demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat and all the offerings made over the cable Saturday night, which amounted to 400,000 bushels were accepted at 1s per quarter advance, owing to the excitement over the Balkan war which, however, was not continued as cables this afternoon were quite tame and the prices bid were all the way from 2c to 4c per bushel under cost. The demand for barley was also good and sales of several loads were made to Glasgow at an advance of 1s per quarter. A fair local trade continues to be done in oats at firm prices. In new crop spring wheat flour a good business was done over the cable, including sales of 25,000 sacks at an advance of 1s per barrel. The local trade is fairly active and steady. Millfeed is active and firm. Demand for butter is fair at advanced prices. Cheese is more active with a stronger undertone. Exports for week 64,654 boxes, -s against 63,731 a year ago. Demand for eggs good. Provisions steady.

water from this open watercourse, they would be under obligation to take care of all other similar drains in the town. At any rate he would not sanction anything being done until the council had given a decision on the question. The work of connecting this drain with the sewer was being proceeded with by the railway employees and he wanted some action taken by the council.

Moved by Coun. Osborne, seconded by Coun. Madill, that Mr. H. B. Sherwood, Supt. of B. of Q. Railway, be instructed not to make any connection with the Centre street sewer for any other purpose other than for the purpose of taking off water from cellar or for sewage purposes. Carried.

Moved by Coun. Madill, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that the matter of the extension of the transmission line of the Seymour Power and Electric Co., along the streets of Napanee be referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee to confer with the said representatives of the said Seymour Power and Electric Co., and report to the council. Carried.

Moved by Coun. Denison, seconded by Coun. Madill, that the Fire, Water and Light Committee investigate re the placing of an electric light near the corner of Robert and Ann streets and report at the next meeting of council. Carried.

Mayor Waller thanked the members of council for their kind expression of sympathy in his recent bereavement occasioned by the death of his father. Acts of kindness and words of sympathy at such times have a strong tendency to draw men closer together. Council adjourned.

An Ancient Warrant.

A discovery of considerable interest has been made at Cape Town. While removing an old picture from its frame, Mr. Lloyd, the librarian at the South African Public Library, found, between the boarding and the back of the picture, a manuscript, which on examination proved to be an old warrant issued in 1650-1. It bore the signature of John Bradshawe, President of the Council, who was also President of the Court which pronounced sentence of death upon Charles I. The document itself is a warrant to Sir John Wollaston to pay to one Thorogood the sum of £108 6s. 8d. for certain supplies to the Parliamentary army in Scotland. Thorogood's receipt is endorsed on the back of the document, which is signed by Bradshawe in his capacity as President of the Council of State, "by the authority of Parliament."

Out of Date Coins In England.

Money coined before certain dates is not legal tender in England, and dates differ for gold, silver and copper. Before June, 1837, is the prohibitive date for gold, while silver coins minted before June, 1817, can be refused in payment of any article, and in the case of copper the fixed year is June, 1861. This is rather curious, but more curious still is the fact that many bank officials themselves are in ignorance of this coin table, so that it might be just possible to slip an extinct coin through unobserved. But even if one managed it at the local bank it could not fail to be "spotted" at the Bank of England, where a special "lookout" is kept for obsolete coins.—Pearson's Weekly.

Frowns.

If frowns had any market price
Or grumbling helped one anywhere
I should not venture or presume
To bid you cease to walk in gloom
Or put away the frown you wear.
It would be foolish and unfair
To give you any such advice
Or to persuade you that a smile
Of hopefulness was worth your while
If frowns had any market price.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Practical Woman.

They had become engaged. "But your proud mother," faltered the young man. "What of her?" asked the girl. "Will she oppose our engagement?" "I hardly think so. Mother is too sensible to waste time opposing a summer engagement."

A BEAUTIFUL PICTURE.

We notice in this week's issue of The Family Herald and Weekly Star, that the publisher's have secured, as a premium picture for subscribers, another beautiful subject, entitled, "Mother's Treasures," a companion to the beautiful picture, "Home Again," which they gave last year. Family Herald pictures are always good and it is said that "Mother's Treasures" is the best yet. It is truly wonderful what great value one receives for one dollar a year in the Family Herald and Weekly Star. It is a paper no home in Canada should be without. Every member of a family will find some part of it interesting and alone well worth the year's subscription. The premium picture, "Mother's Treasures," is 23 by 29 inches, all ready for framing, and alone would sell in any art store at two dollars.

The Family Herald should do bigger business than ever this season.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 14.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 12 were 1500 cattle, 3900 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 425 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale were 1150 cattle, 2625 sheep and lambs, 325 hogs and 300 calves.

A firmer feeling prevailed in the market this morning for cattle and prices for some grades ruled 15c to 25c per cwt. higher, owing to the lighter run. A feature of the trade since this day week has been the arrival of over 30 car loads of northwestern ranch cattle, of which the quality was generally good, but owing to the condition of the market the prices realized for them were below expectations. The gathering of buyers was large and the demand was fairly good on account of the cooler weather.

Supplies of sheep and lambs were fair, but owing to the recent advance in prices in the Toronto market and thruout the eastern townships a stronger feeling developed in the market and prices ruled 15c to 25c per cwt. higher than a week ago. The demand was good from butchers and packers and trade was active with sales of Ontario lambs at $5.35 to $5 and Quebec at $5.50 to $5.75, while ewes sold at $3.75 to $4 per cwt.

Calves were scarce and in good demand at 6c to 7c per lb. for milk-fed stock, while grass-fed stock at from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

Owing to the recent advance in prices for hogs in the Toronto market and the smaller offerings here this morning a strong feeling prevailed in the market and prices advanced 15c to 25c per cwt., as they sold as low as $3.25 in some instances at the latter end of last week. Demand was good from packers. Selected lots sold at $3.65 to $3.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $3.25 to $3.50 per cwt.; medium, $3.50 to $3.75; common, $3.50 to $4; canners, $2.50 to $3; choice cows, $5 to $5.25; medium, $4.50 to $4.75; bulls, $3.25 to $4; milkers, choice, each, $90 to $95; common and medium, each, $80 to $70; springers, $45 to $55.

Sheep—Ewes, $3.75 to $4; bucks and culls, $3.25 to $3.50; lambs, $5.50 to $6. Hogs, f.o.b., $3.65 to $3.75 per cwt. Calves—$3 to $10.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 14.—Cattle—Receipts, 5000 head; steers and heifers slow and steady; cows and bulls active and 15c to 25c higher; prime steers, $9 to $9.50; butchers, $6 to $3.40; bulls, $4.50 to $5.50; stock heifers, $4.25 to $4.65; shipping, $7.50 to $8.80; heifers, $4.75 to $7.75; cows, $3.25 to $5.50; stockers and feeders, $4.50 to $5.75; fresh cows and springers active and firm, $35 to $75.

Hogs—Receipts, 19,200 head; slow and 15c to 25c lower; heavy, $9.25 to $9.35; mixed, $9.15 to $9.25; yorkers, $5.70 to $9.25; pigs, $7 to $7.25; roughs, $3.25 to $3.35; stags, $5 to $7; dairies and grassers, $3.75 to $9.15.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 18,000 head; active; sheep steady; lambs 5c lower; lambs, $4.50 to $7.10; yearlings, $5.25 to $5.50; wethers, $4.75 to $5; ewes, $2 to $4; sheep, mixed, $3 to $4.50.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Cattle—Receipts, 28,000; market steady to 10c lower. Beeves, $5.60 to $10.90; Texas steers, $4.50 to $8; western steers, $5.75 to $9; stockers and feeders, $4.25 to $7.40; cows and heifers, $2.90 to $3; calves, $7 to $10. Hogs—Receipts, 30,000; market active, 5c higher; light, $3.75 to $9.35; mixed, $3.70 to $9.35; heavy, $3.60 to $9.35; rough, $3.60 to $3.80; pigs, $5 to $8; bulk of sales, $9.05 to $9.20.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 4,000; market strong to 15c up; native, $3.25 to $4.40; western, $3.50 to $4.50; yearlings, $4.25 to $5.25. Lambs, native, $4.80 to $7; western, $4.80 to $7.10.

SIR WILFRID'S TRIUMPHANT TOUR

Ottawa, October 9th—Sir Wilfrid Laurier returned to the Capital today from the most remarkable series of triumphs throughout Ontario that have ever fallen to the lot of any public man in Canada. During a tour which lasted almost ten days, in the very heart of the Province which went so strongly against his Government at the last election, he was greeted with an enthusiasm and evident loyalty which proclaimed the fact that the people of Ontario realize the manner in which they were deceived at the last election. Throughout the whole tour it was shown in marked manner that the people of Ontario were determined to make amends, not only when the next test comes at the polls, but now by showing their affection to the Liberal chief and their loyal confidence in his policy.

"We are returning to Laurier," was the slogan everywhere, and on all sides there was ample evidence that the people believed what their banners announced—"A return to Laurier is a return to reason."

And there was no beating about the bush at any of the meetings. At each and every one of them the Liberal Chieftain and his colleagues advanced the main planks of their platform without the slightest hesitation. They were not defending a lost cause. They were arguing for coming victory. Nor did Sir Wilfrid hesitate equally sharply to criticize the Conservative position to-day and to show up the absolute lack of cohesion in the Borden Cabinet which had led to a year of squabbling and inaction.

It was a bold experiment, this invasion by a defeated leader of the very people who had done most to defeat him. Its very boldness added to its success, and the way in which the people showed their appreciation of his declaration "I have one abiding desire and that is for another tussle with the Tories," was greeted everywhere with thunderous applause.

Even in the heyday of his power, when there was everything to induce enthusiasm, the Liberal Chieftain and the policies he advocated never evoked such spontaneous response. Throughout the country, with a popular leader of a Government in an election campaign it is not often that overflow meetings have to be held in the smaller towns. Yet during the whole of his tour meeting had to be doubled and trebled. At Cornwall the big rink proved insufficient for the crowds that gathered in spite of bad weather. At Peterboro, although two meetings had been announced, the rink in the evening again proved too small, while the Town Hall could not accommodate the overflow. At Chatham again the immense Armory, with its accommodation for five thousand people, was too small, and nearly three thousand crowded the rink for an overflow meeting.

But it was at Woodstock Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues had the greatest demonstration probably ever seen in any of the Ontario cities. No less than four meetings had to be arranged for the afternoon and evening, and even then an overflow meeting was held in the market place. Not less than twenty thousand people crowded the city to welcome Sir Wilfrid, and his colleagues, and the scenes of welcome which greeted him made it look more like a ministerial triumph than the visit of a Leader of the Opposition.

Finally at Mount Forest, a town of showed their indignation at the deception that had been practised on them. By the cheers for Sir Wilfrid they showed their determination to set right the disgrace which had fallen upon the Province of Ontario at the last election, when so many had been stampeded by appeals and prejudice.

This series of meetings marked effects. They have shown that the Liberals, in the person of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "begin the fight to defeat," and they have shown that the Tories who had been so confident that no matter how Liberal the Provinces or the Province of Quebec, they still could win Ontario. There is every indication that the Tory Government and its incompetency and outlook of the people, having produced a different feeling in the province, and that when comes Ontario will give a verdict to that of September.

Throughout the whole tour Sir Wilfrid responded in noble fashion to the words of Laurier: "We are returning to Laurier." We are returning to Laurier, less and courageously to without any appeal to pass judgment. Now that we have seen the failure of the present government to deal with the Nation, any other of the great questions of a whole year in office, the remedy in their own hands apply it.

"Heaven is my witness I have done I did because it was good of Canada, and my duty as Canadian and British—I would do it over again."

Don't forget the date of demonstration of WISS 23rd to 29th. M. S. MADOLE like a ministerial triumph than the visit of a Leader of the Opposition.

Finally at Mount Forest, a town of about three thousand people, came the wonderful culmination of a wonderful tour. From far and wide the people of the district flocked in, some driving as much as twenty miles to attend the meeting, while special trains within a radius of fifty miles came, until about fifteen thousand people were gathered in the little town, more than it had ever attempted to accommodate before. It had been thought that with a rink holding four thousand people two meetings would be ample, but long before the time for the evening gathering had arrived the rink was crowded to suffocation. The Town Hall was hastily requisitioned, and another couple of thousand people gathered there, but still hundreds were unable to get within sound of the speakers. These formed processions with torches and their battle-cry was "We are returning to Laurier."

It is estimated that during this brief tour of Old Ontario, Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues addressed not less than fifty thousand people, and yet at not a single meeting did they meet with anything like opposition.

On his tour the Liberal Chieftain was accompanied by a notable group of his colleagues, including the Hon. Sydney Fisher, George P. Graham, Charles Murphy and W. L. MacKenzie King, while at every point visited he was joined by Liberal Leaders from nearby points.

Everywhere there was ample evidence, not only that those Liberals who at last Election had been led astray by appeals to passion and prejudice now realized their mistake, but that the Conservatives themselves were becoming restless at the increasing evidence of incapacity shown by the Borden Government.

More than that on every side there was evidence of a growing tide of indignation at the campaign of whispered calumnies and secret appeals to racial and religious prejudices which had been carried on throughout Ontario at the last election.

Coupled with this was proof of even greater indignation at the manner in which Mr. Borden had misled the people by his compromise with the Nationalists whereby immediately after his election he had included in his Cabinet the very men who had been loudest in denouncing any Naval Policy. This Sir Wilfrid pointed out everywhere was a coalition of two absolutely hostile groups—the Quebec Nationalists utterly opposed to any sort of Naval programme either a centralized Imperial policy, or Naval Defence of Canada's shores, and on the other hand the Jingos who clamored for direct contribution to Imperial Defence.

Everywhere in Ontario this unholy alliance was denounced and its natural effect in preventing the Government from doing anything at all was pointed out. Mr. Borden's insistence upon the "Speedy" construction of a Navy while he was in opposition was contrasted with his utter failure to do anything during the twelve months in which he has held office as Prime Minister and this notwithstanding an ample policy had been outlined and entered upon by the outgoing Government.

Everywhere, also, the question was asked if there was a Conservative who approved of the inclusion in the Borden Cabinet of the Quebec Anti-Imperialist Nationalists, Messrs. Monk, Nantel and Pelletier. This challenge was made at every meeting, and throughout the length and breadth of Old Ontario not a Conservative could be found to express approval. N. C. I. AGAIN SUPREME Defeated Picton in an Almost Humorous Series of Games.

Picton Lacked the Combination and Speed.

Picton dropped into Napanee for the annual Football and Basketball Tournament Saturday, Oct. 12th, 1912. The morning was very threatening, but it did not prevent the pupils of the N. C. I. from turning out to welcome the Picton teams, who arrived about noon by the steamer Brockville. The sun broke through the heavy clouds just as at the time of the first games and those who went to the park or collegiate grounds were treated to some of the finest games seen in a long time. Our teams proved to be too strong for Picton and as a result the scores are very one-sided.

THE JUNIOR BASKETBALL GAME.

At 12.30 Napanee trotted out their All-Star Juniors who lined up as follows:

Centre—Miss E. VanLoven.
Guards—Miss F. Leonard and Miss M. Gibson, (Capt.)
Forwards—Miss C. Nesbitt and Miss H. Gibbard.

They were followed in a few minutes by Picton:

Centre—Miss Hickey.
Guards—Miss Welsh and Miss Allison.
Forwards—Miss Sprague and Miss White.

The game was called and right from the whistle Napanee started things going. Their sensational checking and shooting kept Picton dazzled, and before they realized it Napanee had scored three times. Miss H. Gibbard played a wonderful game, her shooting being of the gilt-edged type. It was through the splendid defence of Miss F. Leonard and Miss M. Gibson that Picton failed to score more than they did. Miss E. VanLoven, at centre, put up a splendid game, her reach giving her the best of nearly every face-off. Miss C. Nesbitt ably assisted in the scoring, several points being registered to her credit. After the first half Napanee completely swamped Picton and when the whistle blew for time the score stood 7 to 6 in favor of Napanee.

THE JUNIOR FOOTBALL.

A small crowd went over to see the most evenly contested game of the day. Though Picton played very good ball they were clearly no match for Napanee with such famous and heavy players as Fatty Davern, Bev. Simpson, and Ken. Ham. All the Napanee team played their positions perfectly. Babcock, Bartlett and McLeod kept the ball right in the Picton goal, and Walsh and Milne backed them up in fine style. When Davern or Simpson got a swipe at the ball something had to go, and it was usually the ball. Perry and Tice were always in the game and broke up any dangerous rushes. R. Sills had only one chance which he took very neatly. Napanee (2)—Goal, R. Sills; Full backs, Simpson and Davern; Halves, Perry, Tice and Ham; Centre, H. Babcock; Wings, McLeod, Bartlett, Walsh and Milne.

Picton, (0)—Goal, Cole; Full backs, Goodwin and Smith; Halves, Shortt, Boulder and Allen; Wings, Woods, Frederick, Mandeville and Lazier; Centre, Spencer.

COMPOSED 'HIAWATHA'

SAMUEL COLERIDGE-TAYLOR IS DEAD AT AN EARLY AGE.

Colored Musician Whose Work Has Been One of the Most Remarkable Things in the History of His Art Was in His Prime When Death Came to Him—His Father Was Born in Sierra Leone.

Musicians the world over will learn with sincere regret of the death at the early age of 37 of Mr. Samuel Coleridge-Taylor the famous composer of "Hiawatha." Mr. Coleridge-Taylor was walking in the street at Croyden on his way to the Crystal Palace, when he was taken ill and fell down in the road. He was unrecognized, and, recovering himself, managed to get home by tramcar unassisted. He went straight to bed and the doctor diagnosed his complaint as influenza. Pneumonia supervened with fatal results. Deceased had African blood in his veins, for his father was born in Sierra Leone, where he practiced as a doctor. His mother, however, was an Englishwoman, and the composer himself was born in England in 1875. Like many musicians, Mr. Coleridge-Taylor achieved fame early, for he was only just leaving college as a student when "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast" was first performed, and was at once acclaimed as a great work. After "Hiawatha," Mr. Coleridge-Taylor's greatest triumph was "The Death of Minnehaha," which was closely followed by "Hiawatha's Departure." Mr. Coleridge-Taylor's scope was wide, as several of his minor productions included music for theatres and music halls, ranging from a ballet to the incidental music to "Othello." Another of his works for the stage was "A Tale of Old Japan," which he regarded as his best work. Mr. Coleridge-Taylor, whose name so closely resembled that of one of the greatest of English poets, was an enthusiastic student of English poetry. He was in the habit of absorbing his favorite poems, making himself thoroughly acquainted with their meaning, spirit, and rhythm and then he gradually may be spoken of as the shedding of blood, regardless of whether or not a single drop of blood be spilled literally. Thus the presentation of the blood of the sacrifices of old represented the offering to God of their lives as typically an offset to the forfeited life of Adam and his children, who lost life through his disobedience.

BLOOD ATONEMENT WAS NECESSARY

Need of the Hour In Pulpit and Pew Is a Correct Appreciation of the Value of Blood Atonement for Sin, Declared Pastor Russell at Lynn.

Israel's Atonement Sacrifices.

Each year, at approximately this season, the Jews celebrate their Atonement Day, by which their sins are thought to be covered afresh for the year begun. The underlying thought is a reminder that they are sinners, and that without the shedding of blood, without a sacrificial death, there can be no Divine forgiveness of sins.

For more than sixteen centuries Israel observed these typical Atonement Day services, up to the time that Jesus came. Since then the Jews can have no Atonement Day, really; because their priestly line is lost, and they have no Holy and Most Holy in which to make the Atonement, and no Shekinah Mercy-Seat on which the blood of Atonement may be placed, and from which Divine blessing and forgiveness would proceed. They, nevertheless, keep up the ceremonial.

In their typical procedure the Day of Atonement included all the Atonement work of the priest on the tenth day of the seventh month. His Atonement included all the Atonement work of the priest on the tenth day of the seventh month. His Atonement sacrifice consisted of two parts—first, a bullock, which he slew; and afterwards a goat, which he treated in like manner. He took the blood of the bullock into the Most Holy and applied it, not on behalf of Israel in general, but simply on behalf of the priestly tribe of Levi.

After accomplishing this he came out and slew the secondary part of his offering, the Lord's goat, which typified those consecrated to be his under-priesthood. After treating the goat precisely as the bullock had been treated, its blood was taken into the Most Holy and there was sprinkled on the Mercy Seat, not on behalf of the tribe of Levi, but on behalf of all the other tribes—on behalf of "all the people," representative of all humanity—how eventually they will come

The vessel requires only to be met to the approbation of the public, and the proprietor is determined to do everything in his power for public encouragement. AD SORE FOUR YEARS

BUK HAS HEALED IT!

Wilson, 110 Wickson Ave., says: "About four years ago I appeared on the right side of the street. This spot increased in size. It became about half an inch square and very painful. I went to a doctor, but the ointment he gave me had no good effect. The doctor finally discharged me, and I was in pain. I had it cauterized, but it did not help. I tried all kinds of salves, but no good, and I continued to use it for four years! I bought a box of Zam-Buk was one day me, and I used it. Although the sore was so small, it seemed to me so good, so I purchased a further box. It did me more and more good, to my delight, before I had used Zam-Buk three weeks, I saw it was going to heal the sore. In a month it was healed! I was a lady in the east of the sea whose husband suffered for years from a sore on his leg. On my recommendation, Zam-Buk was tried. The other day, when I told her that it had healed completely. My daughter, who lives in Lethbridge, has also used Zam-Buk with same satisfactory result. I am, beyond all doubt, the nearest to a cure known."

The opinion of all persons who have really tried Zam-Buk. It is a cure for eczema, piles, abscesses, ulcers, ring-worm, cuts, burns, caldies, bruises, and all skin and diseases. 50c. box, all drug stores, or post free from J. C. Co., Toronto, for price. In all diseases use Zam-Buk Soap, etc.

Piction, (0)—Goal, Cole; Full backs, Goodwin and Smith; Halves, Shortt, Boulter and Allen; Wings, Woods, Frederick, Mandeville and Lazier; Centre, Spencer.

SENIOR BASKETBALL.

It was a shame to do it, but Napanee's past senior team found it necessary to administer an awful whalloping to the poor Piction girls. Piction started off with a rush, got past Napanee's defence, and scored twice. It looked very much like Piction's game, but Napanee's guards woke up and the whole team commenced a machine-like combination which had Piction up in the air. Through the great shooting of Miss E. Laidley and Miss B. Spencer the score piled up like a gas bill. Miss A. Prout and Miss M. Perry formed one of the best defences Napanee has ever produced. Miss G. Ward, at centre, put up a dazzling hand of basketball and had her check, and the referee, entirely at her mercy. Miss R. Hurst was the shining star of the Piction team. Miss J. Ostrander refereed in a very capable manner and was thoroughly acquainted with every department of the game.

The teams—Napanee (21)—Centre, Miss G. Ward; Guards, Miss M. Perry and Miss A. Prout; Forwards, Miss E. Laidley and Miss B. Spencer, (capt.); Piction (5)—Centre, Miss M. Graves; Guards, Miss J. Taylor and Miss K. Hamel; Forwards, Miss R. Hurst and Miss B. Wright.

SENIOR FOOTBALL.

A great crowd now assembled at the park to witness the most important game of the day. The Pictionites were very confident of winning this game, but from the kick-off Napanee went at it hammer and tongs, and their speed and combination soon had Piction thinking of home and mother, and so completely were they bewildered that they forgot that they were playing football and attempted an Indian massacre. Special attention should be made of the playing of Wilson and Slaven, of Piction, who were rough to the extreme and were continually trying to kill or fatally injure Captain Jack. In the last half Napanee, although having the wind to contend with, kept the ball right in the Piction goal and scored three times, Carter getting one (his second for the game), McGreer, one and Vrooman, one. Napanee's defence had very little to do, but anything that came down the line was handled by Babcock and Doller. The former kicked a great game, most of his kicks being long and effective. Doller had very little to do till late in the game when he started a rush which ended in a tally. Soby played in his dashing style, and, with Cambridge, worked some splendid combinations. Hamstick to his check, like the windows of a G.T.R. passenger coach (you can't move 'em). Mills played a heavy game and used his weight with devastating effect. Vrooman, Carter and McGreer were responsible for Napanee's five counts, Percy's long shoot completely fooling the Piction goal. Schermehorn was the same old boy, right in the thick of everything, and very effective. Sills got everything and cleared in fine style. Of the refereeing, the less said the better, but we would meekly advise Mr. Haylock to take a correspondence course in football. The score: N. C. I.—5; P. C. I.—0.

The teams—Napanee—Goal, I. Sills; Full Backs, Babcock and Doller; Halves, Vrooman, Ham and Mills; Centre, Carter; Wings, McGreer and Schermehorn; Cambridge and Soby (capt.); Piction—Goal, Ward; Full Backs, Hobson and Schmidt; Halves, Ingham, Gerow and Musgrove; Centre, Slaven; Wings, Hart and Wilson, Frederick and Adams.—Com.

student of English poetry. He was in the habit of absorbing his favorite poems, making himself thoroughly acquainted with their meaning, spirit, and rhythm, and then he gradually evolved the music appropriate to the theme. He was of opinion that the negroes of West Africa have a great capacity for music, although he could not speak from experience, having never visited his father's native country. Nevertheless, he took a very great interest in negro music, and he studied and wrote about it from a scientific point of view.

In 1904 Mr. Coleridge-Taylor crossed the Atlantic to conduct a performance of the choir that bears his name, and its members greeted him with an ode beginning, "O, thou illustrious one, whose genius, as the sun, illumines our race." In 1910 he wrote an orchestral rhapsody on negro melodies. Undoubtedly he was the first person of negro birth to achieve fame as a creative musician. Mr. Coleridge-Taylor believed that taste and capacity for music in England had greatly improved in recent years, and his own work must be regarded as adding lustre to the history of musical composition in this country.

A Successful Interview.

The late Arthur McEwan when he was working on a San Francisco newspaper was attracted by the activities of a politician who was vulgar, illiterate and hideously ungrammatical in his method of expression. McEwan looked up this man and had a talk with him. Then he went back to the office and wrote the interview in the most perfect English, brilliant, polished and crammed the story full of classical allusions, quotations and big words. It was a most scholarly production, and McEwan considered the satire great. Next day McEwan had a call from the politician. "I wanted to thank you for that interview," he said. "It's bully. Just what I said. You must be a grand shorthand reporter."—Saturday Evening Post.

Martyrdom of the Bride.

A peculiar and barbaric marriage custom of the Kabyle women of Africa consists in the martyrdom of the bride, who, clad in her wedding finery, stands through an entire morning against a pillar in the village square, her eyes closed, her arms pressed to her sides and with only the narrow base of the column for a foothold, the while a ring of villagers criticise and comment on her appearance.—Argonaut.

Evidence to the Contrary.

"You've had a bad cold in the head, have you, Brooks?" said Rivers. "Well, one good thing about that is that it doesn't make you cough."

Whereupon Brooks, without a word, exhibited the doctor bill he had just received.—Exchange.

A Handy Bath Mat.

To those who are living in houses in which there are no bathrooms this bath mat will be found the handiest thing in the house, especially where there are children. Buy a square of dark table oilcloth, cut off corners to make it nearly round, get a piece of inch rope long enough to reach around mat, fold edge of oilcloth back over rope to under side and stitch in place over rope. No water can get on floor when the tub is set on this mat.

the Mercy Seat, not on behalf of the tribe of Levi, but on behalf of all the other tribes—on behalf of "all the people," representative of all humanity—how eventually they will come into harmony with God.

"The Better Sacrifices"—Antitypical.

In the type the bullock represented Jesus consecrated to death, and dying and dead; and the high priest represented The Christ, spirit-begotten. Jesus, as the appointed antitypical priest after the order of Melchisedec, offered up Himself—His human body—when He reached manhood's estate—thirty years. This death of the bullock represents Him in His baptism at Jordan. Gradually He fulfilled His baptism unto death, for three and a half years, completing it at Calvary. During His earthly ministry, as a Priest He was in the Holy, having fellowship with the Father. At Calvary, as Priest, He passed under the second veil, and in His resurrection arose on the other side of the veil, in the Most Holy—in the perfect spirit condition—in glory, honor, immortality, a partaker of the Divine nature.

Our Lord remained for forty days to manifest Himself to His disciples, after which He ascended on high and presented the merit of His sacrifice (Heb. 9:24) on behalf of the Church, just as Aaron presented the blood of the bullock on behalf of his household, the tribe of Levi. The Divine acceptance of this merit on behalf of the Church was manifested by the giving of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost.

Members of Jesus Still Dying.

The Scriptures set forth that the faithful few of Jesus' followers who will constitute the Royal Priesthood by and by have been represented as the antitypical Lord's Goat of the Atonement Day, which is caused to pass through the same experience exactly as the antitypical Bullock, our Lord. (Heb. 13:11-13.) Thus the faithful followers of Jesus are to be sharers in His suffering of this present time and to be sharers in His glory by and by. "If we suffer with Him we shall also reign with Him."

Not until the last of these faithful ones of the "better sacrifices" shall have tasted death—not until the fore-ordained number shall have been completed in glory—will the forgiveness of the world's sins be accomplished. At that time the antitypical Priest will make the secondary application of His blood on behalf of "all the people," on behalf of all who will ever come into harmony with God. As the Church class was typified by the tribe of Levi, so all mankind were typified in the remaining tribes of Israel, whose blessing means the blessing of the world.

Since atonement signifies to make atone, to bring into harmony, the great High Priest, Christ, must first make satisfaction of Divine Justice, and then the way will be open before Him for a thousand years to bless those whose sins He cancels.

The man who is in love with himself generally has a clear field.

Wisdom is a pervasive thing, slights no one entirely and abides exclusively with none.

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

CHAPTER XXIII.

Hunting For the Equipments.

THE most preoccupied of the four friends was certainly D'Artagnan. Notwithstanding all his inquiries respecting Mme. Bonacieux, he could obtain no intelligence of her. M. de Treville had spoken of her to the queen; the queen was ignorant where the mercer's young wife was, but had promised to have her sought for.

Athos did not leave his chamber. He made up his mind not to take a single step to provide for his equipment.

"We have still a fortnight before us," said he to his friends. "Well, if at the end of a fortnight I have found nothing, or, rather, if nothing has come to find me, as I am too good a Catholic to kill myself with a pistol bullet, I will seek a good cause of quarrel with four of his eminence's guards or with eight Englishmen. I will fight until one of them has killed me, which, considering the number, cannot fail to happen. It will then be said of me that I died for the king, so that I shall have performed my duty without the expense of equipment."

Porthos continued to walk about with his hands behind him, tossing his head and repeating:

"I shall follow up my idea."

Aranis, anxious and negligently dressed, said nothing.

As Porthos had first found an idea and had thought of it earnestly afterward, he was the first to act. D'Artagnan perceived him one day walking into the church of St. Leu and followed him instinctively. As D'Artagnan contented herself with saying to the musketeer with concentrated fury:

"Eh, M. Porthos, you don't offer me any holy water?"

Porthos at the sound of that voice started like a man awakened from a sleep of a hundred years.

"Ma-madame," cried he. "Is that you? How is your husband, our dear M. Coquenard? Is he still as stingy as ever? Where can my eyes have been not to have even perceived you during the two hours the sermon has lasted?"

"I was within two paces of you, monsieur," replied she, "but you did not perceive me because you had no eyes but for the pretty lady to whom you just now gave the holy water."

Porthos pretended to be confused.

"Yes," said he; "that is a duchess of my acquaintance with whom I have great trouble to meet on account of the jealousy of her husband and who sent me word that she should come today."

"M. Porthos," said the procureuse, "will you have the kindness to offer me your arm for five minutes? I have something to say to you."

"Certainly, madame," said Porthos, winking to himself. At that moment D'Artagnan passed in pursuit of milady. He cast a passing glance at Porthos and beheld this triumphant look.

"Ah, M. Porthos," cried she—"ah, M. Porthos, you are a great conqueror, it appears. That must be a princess at least, that lady with her negro boy and her maid."

"Madame, you are deceived; she is simply a duchess."

"Ah, you are quite the pet of the ladies, M. Porthos! How quickly men forget!"

"Still less quickly than the women, to watch the conference from a hedge of nut trees.

Soon he heard the noise of and speedily saw that of in opposite to him. She put her fair head out of the window and gave her orders to her female attendant. The latter, a pretty girl twenty years of age, made her way toward the terrace upon which Lubin had perceived Lubin.

D'Artagnan followed the maid and saw her go to the terrace. But it happened that one in the house called Lubin Planchet remained alone, in all directions for his master.

The maid approached whom she took for Lubin, and gave him a little billet to him—

"For your master," said she, "of consequence—take it quick."

Thereupon she ran toward the carriage, which had turned round the way it came, jumped up, and the carriage drove. Planchet took the billet and opened the letter to these words:

A person who takes more care of you than she is willing to confess to know on what day it will walk in the forest. Tomorrow at the Hotel of the Field of the Cloth of Gold, in black and red with your reply.

"Oh, oh!" said D'Artagnan, "I am about the health of the king's Wardes; he is not dead, then?"

"Oh, no, monsieur, he is a man who can be with four swords in his body."

"Now, Planchet, jump up and let us overtake the horse!"

They soon effected this. In five minutes they perceived the carriage drawn up by the cavalier, richly dressed, waiting for the coach door.

The conversation between D'Artagnan and the cavalier was so animated that D'Artagnan stopped on the steps of the carriage without any further delay, the pretty maid being aware of his presence.

The conversation took place in a language which D'Artagnan could not understand, but he perceived the young man plainly the beautiful Englishwoman a great rage. The cavalier laughed, which appeared to the Englishwoman still more.

D'Artagnan thought this moment to interfere.

"Madame," said he, "will you permit me to offer you my services?"

At the first word milady looked at the young man with astonishment, and when he spoke:

"Monsieur," said she in French, "I should wish to place myself under your protection if the person with whom you are speaking were not my brother."

"Ah, excuse me, then!" said D'Artagnan. "You must be aware that I am ignorant of that, madam."

"What is that stupid fellow saying about?" cried the cavalier.

"Stupid fellow yourself!" said D'Artagnan.

The carriage went on. The cavalier made a movement as if to ward, he was the first to act. D'Artagnan perceived him one day walking into the church of St. Leu and followed him instinctively. As D'Artagnan took some precautions to conceal himself, Porthos believed he had not been seen. D'Artagnan entered behind him. Porthos went and leaned against the side of a pillar; D'Artagnan, still unperceived, supported himself against the other side of it.

There happened to be a sermon, which made the church very full. Porthos took advantage of this circumstance to ogle the women. Thanks to the care of Mousqueton, the exterior was far from announcing the distress of the interior, and Porthos was still the handsome Porthos.

D'Artagnan observed, on the bench nearest to the pillar against which Porthos leaned, a sort of ripe beauty, rather yellow and rather dry, but erect and haughty, under her black hood. The eyes of Porthos were furtively cast upon this lady and then roved about at large over the nave.

On her side, the lady, who from time to time blushed, darted with the rapidity of lightning a glance toward the inconstant Porthos. He, seeing this, began to make signals to a beautiful lady who was near the choir and who not only was a beautiful lady, but, still further no doubt, a great lady, for she had behind her a negro boy, who had brought the cushion on which she knelt, and a female servant.

The lady with the red cushion produced a great effect—for she was very handsome—upon the lady with the black hood, who saw in her a rival really to be dreaded; a great effect upon Porthos, who thought her much more pretty than the lady with the black hood; a great effect upon D'Artagnan, who recognized in her the lady of Meung, of Calais and Dover, whom his persecutor, the man with the scar, had saluted by the name of milady.

D'Artagnan, without losing sight of the lady of the red cushion, continued to watch the proceedings of Porthos, which amused him greatly. He directly guessed that the lady of the black hood was the lawyer's wife mentioned by the innkeeper of Chantilly as Porthos' "duchess."

He guessed, likewise, that Porthos was taking his revenge for the defeat of Chantilly, when the woman had proved so refractory with respect to her purse.

The sermon over, the lawyer's wife advanced toward the basin of holy water. Porthos went before her and, instead of a finger, dipped his whole hand in. The procureuse smiled, thinking that it was for her that Porthos put himself to this expense, but she was cruelly and promptly undeceived. When she was only about three steps from him he turned his head round, fixing his eyes invariably upon the lady of the red cushion, who had risen and was approaching, followed by her black boy and her maid.

When the lady of the red cushion came close to Porthos, Porthos drew his dripping hand from the basin. The fair devotee touched the great hand of Porthos with her delicate fingers, smiled, made the sign of the cross and left the church.

This was too much for the other woman. She entertained no doubt that there was an affair of gallantry between this lady and Porthos. She con-

"Ah, you are quite the pet or the ladies, M. Porthos! How quickly men forget!"

"Still less quickly than the women, in my opinion," replied Porthos; "as a proof, madame, I may say I was your victim; when wounded, dying, I was abandoned by the surgeons; I, the offspring of a noble family, who placed reliance upon your friendship, I was near dying of my wounds at first and of hunger afterward, in a beggarly inn at Chantilly, without your ever deigning once to reply to the burning letters I addressed to you."

"But, M. Porthos," murmured the woman, who began to feel that, to judge by the conduct of the great ladies of the time, she was wrong. "It was my husband that would not hear of lending."

"Mme. Coquenard," said Porthos, "remember the first letter you wrote me, and which I preserve engraven in my memory."

The woman uttered a groan.

"Besides," said she, "the sum you required me to borrow was rather large; you said you wanted 1,000 livres!"

"Fie, madame, fie!" said Porthos, as if disgusted; "let us not talk about money, if you please; it is humiliating."

"Then you no longer love me!" said his companion slowly and sadly.

"Think of the offense you have committed toward me, madame! It remains here!" said Porthos, placing his hand on his heart and pressing it strongly.

"I will repair it; indeed I will, my dear Porthos."

"Besides, what did I ask of you? A loan, nothing more. After all, I am not an unreasonable man. I know you are not rich, Mme. Coquenard, and that your husband is obliged to bleed his poor clients to squeeze a few paltry crowns from them."

She was piqued.

"Please to know, M. Porthos, that my strong box, strong box of a lawyer's wife as it may be, is better filled than those of your ruined minxes."

"That, then, doubles the offense," said Porthos, disengaging his arm, "for if you are rich, Mme. Coquenard, then there is no excuse for your refusal. Let us say no more upon the subject, I beg of you. You don't know me—all sympathy is extinct between us."

"Begone, then, to your beautiful duchess. I will detain you no longer."

"And she is not to be despised, in my opinion."

"Now, M. Porthos, once more, and this is the last! Do you love me still?"

"Alas, madame," said Porthos, in the most melancholy tone he could assume, "when we are about to enter upon a campaign, a campaign in which my presentiments tell me I shall be killed—in a fortnight's time this fatal campaign is to open. I shall be fearfully engaged in providing for my equipment. Then I am obliged to make a journey to my family in the lower part of Brittany to obtain the sum necessary for my departure."

Porthos observed a last struggle between love and avarice.

"And as," continued he, "the duchess you saw at the church has estates near to those of my family, we mean to make the journey together. Journeys, you know, appear much shorter when we travel two in company."

"Come to our house tomorrow," said large."

the woman. "You are the son of my aunt, consequently my cousin; you come from Noyon, in Picardy; you have several lawsuits and no lawyer. Can you collect all that?"

"And be upon your guard before my husband, who is rather shrewd notwithstanding his seventy-six years. The poor man may be expected to leave me a widow every hour," continued she, throwing a significant glance at Porthos. "Fortunately by our marriage contract the survivor takes everything."

"You are a woman of precaution, I see, my dear Mme. Coquenard," said Porthos, squeezing the hand of the procureuse tenderly.

"We are, then, reconciled, dear M. Porthos?" said she, simpering.

"For life," said Porthos in the same manner.

CHAPTER XXIV.

D'Artagnan and the Englishman.

D'ARTAGNAN followed milady without being perceived by her. He saw her get into her carriage and heard her order the coachman to drive to St. Germain.

It was useless to endeavor to keep pace on foot with a carriage drawn by two powerful horses. D'Artagnan returned to the Rue Feron. In the Rue de Seine he met with Planchet and ordered him to go and saddle two horses in M. de Treville's stables, one for himself (D'Artagnan) and one for Planchet. M. de Treville on all common occasions had allowed him the liberty to do so.

D'Artagnan and Planchet got into the saddle and took the road to St. Germain.

As he rode along Mme. Bonacieux recurred constantly to the mind of the young man. He was ready to go to the end of the world to seek her; but, the world being round, it has many ends, so that he did not know which way to turn. In the meantime, he was going to try to find out who milady was. Milady had spoken to the man in the black cloak, therefore she knew him. Now, in the opinion of D'Artagnan, it was certainly the man in the black cloak who had carried off Mme. Bonacieux the second time, as he had carried her off the first.

At St. Germain he rode up a very quiet street, looking to the right and the left to see if he could catch any vestige of his beautiful English woman, when from the terrace in front of a pretty house which had no window toward the street he saw a face peep out with which he thought he was acquainted.

"Eh, monsieur," said Planchet, addressing D'Artagnan. "don't you remember that face which is gaping about yonder? It is poor Lubin, the lackey of the Count de Wardes, he whom you so well accommodated a month ago at Calais, on the road to the governor's country house."

"Do you think he would recollect you?"

"I don't think he can have retained a very clear recollection of me."

"Well, find out, if you can, whether his master is dead or not."

Planchet dismounted and went straight up to Lubin, who did not at all remember him, and the two lackeys began to chat with the best understanding possible, while D'Artagnan turned the two horses into a lane and went round the house, coming back and method as if he had been practic- ing in a school.

Porthos, corrected, no doubt, of his too great confidence by his adventure of Chantilly, played with prudence.

Aramis, who had the third canto of a poem to finish, made all the dispatch of a man very much pressed for time.

Athos, the first, killed his adversary. He hit him but once; but, as he had foretold, that hit was a mortal one.

Porthos, the second, stretched his upon the grass with a wound through his thigh, and as the Englishman, with- out making any further resistance, then surrendered his sword. Porthos took him up in his arms and carried him to his carriage.

Aramis pushed his so vigorously that after going back fifty paces he finished by fairly taking to his heels and disap- peared amid the hooting of the lack- ews.

As to D'Artagnan, he fought purely and simply on the defensive, and when he saw his adversary pretty well fa- tigated, with a vigorous side thrust he twisted the sword from his grasp and sent it glittering into the air.

"I could kill you, milord," said he to the Englishman. "You are completely at my mercy, but I spare your life for the sake of your sister."

D'Artagnan was at the height of joy. He had realized the plan which he had fancied, the development of which had produced smiles upon his face.

The Englishman, delighted at hav- ing to do with a gentleman of such a kind disposition, pressed D'Artagnan in his arms and paid a thousand com- pliments to the three musketeers, and as Porthos' adversary was already in- stalled in the carriage and as Aramis' had run away, they had nothing to think about but the defunct. He was taken away by his friend.

"My young friend, if you will permit me, I hope to give you that name," said Lord de Winter; "on this very evening, if agreeable to you, I will present you to my sister, Lady Clarik; for I am desirous that she should take you into her good graces, and as she is not in bad odor at court, she may per- haps on some future day speak a word that will not prove useless to you."

D'Artagnan blushed with pleasure, and bowed a sign of assent.

Lord de Winter, on quitting D'Ar- tagnan, gave him his sister's address. She lived in No. 6 Place Royale, then the fashionable quarter, and undertook to call and take him with him in order to introduce him. D'Artagnan appoint- ed 8 o'clock at Athos' residence.

This introduction to Lady Clarik oc- cupied the head of our Gascon greatly. He remembered in what a strange manner this woman had hitherto been mixed up in his destiny. According to the change that took place in her face. Now that she believed herself to be no longer observed, a sentiment which resembled ferocity animated her coun- tenance. She bit her handkerchief with all her might.

I have advised several women who suf- ered as I did to try your remedies. You may publish this if you wish." — Mrs. DAVID R. MORRIS, South Wellington, Vancouver Island, B. C.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unquali- fied endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of suc- cess as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta- ble Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for wo- man's ills such as inflammation, ulcer- ation, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and we believe it is unequalled for women dur- ing the period of change of life.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta- ble Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for ad- vice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

That pretty little maid whom D'Ar- tagnan had already observed then came in; she spoke some words to Lord de Winter in English, and he im- mediately requested D'Artagnan's per- mission to retire, excusing himself on account of the urgency of the business that called him away and charged his sister to obtain his pardon.

D'Artagnan exchanged a shake of the hand with Lord de Winter and then returned to milady. Her coun- tenance, with surprising mobility, had recovered its gracious expression, but some little red spots upon her hand- kerchief indicated that she had bitten her lips till the blood came.

The conversation took a cheerful turn. Milady told D'Artagnan that Lord de Winter was her brother-in- law and not her brother; she had mar- ried a younger brother of the family who had left her a widow with one child. This child was the only heir to

Although the musketeer was not ex- pected before 1 o'clock, his mistress had been upon the watch ever since 12, reckoning that the heart, or per- haps the stomach of her lover would bring him before his time.

"It is my cousin!" cried she. "Come in!"

The master of the house had without doubt been warned of his visit, as he expressed no surprise at the sight of Porthos, who advanced toward him with a sufficiently familiar air and sal- uted him courteously.

"We are cousins, it appears, M. Por- thos?" said he, rising by supporting his weight upon the arms of his cane chair:

The old man, enveloped in a large black doublet, in which the whole of his slender body was concealed, was brisk and dry. His little gray eyes shone like carbuncles and appeared, with his grinning mouth, to be the only part of his face in which life survived. Unfortunately the legs began to refuse their service to this bony machine. During the last five or six months that this weakness had been felt the worthy had nearly become the slave of his wife.

The cousin was received with resig- nation, that was all. Master Coque- nard, firm upon his legs, would have declined all relationship with M. Por- thos.

"Yes, monsieur, we are cousins," said Porthos without being disconcerted, as he had never reckoned upon being re- ceived enthusiastically by the husband.

The hour of dinner soon arrived. They passed into the eating room, a large dark apartment situated opposite to the kitchen.

The clerks, who, as it appeared, had smelled unusual perfumes in the house, were of military punctuality and stood with their stools in their hands, quite ready to sit down. Their jaws moved preliminarily with fearful threaten- ings.

M. Coquenard entered, pushed along upon his chair with castors by Mme. Coquenard, whom Porthos assisted in rolling her husband up to the table.

He had scarcely entered when he be- gan to agitate his nose and his jaws after the example of his clerks.

"Oh, oh!" said he. "Here is a potage which is rather inviting!"

"What can they smell so extraordi- nary in this potage?" said Porthos at the sight of a pale bouillon, abundant, but perfectly free from meat, and upon the surface of which a few crusts swam about as wide apart as the is- lands of an archipelago.

Master Coquenard was served first, then Porthos; afterward Mme. Coque- nard filled her own plate and distrib- uted the crusts without bouillon to the impatient clerks.

his conviction, she was some creature of the cardinal's, and yet he felt himself invincibly drawn toward her by one of those sentiments for which we cannot account. His only fear was that milady would recognize in him the man of Meung and of Dover. Then she knew that he was one of the friends of M. de Treville, and, consequently, that he belonged body and soul to the king, which would make him lose a part of his advantage, since when known to milady as he knew her he played only an equal game with her. As to the commencement of an intrigue between her and M. de Wardes our presumptuous hero gave but little heed to that, although the marquis was young, handsome, rich and high in the cardinal's favor.

Milady Clarik received D'Artagnan ceremoniously. Her house was remarkably sumptuous, and while the most part of the English had quitted or were about to quit France on account of the war, milady had just been laying out much money upon her residence, which proved that the general measure which drove the English from France did not affect her.

"You see," said Lord de Winter, presenting D'Artagnan to his sister, "a young gentleman who has spared my life. Thank him then, madame, if you have any affection for me."

Milady frowned slightly, a scarcely visible cloud passed over her brow, and so peculiar a smile appeared upon her lips that the young man who saw and observed this triple shade almost shuddered at it.

The brother did not perceive this; he had turned round to play with milady's favorite monkey, which had pulled him by the doublet.

"You are welcome, monsieur," said milady in a voice whose singular sweetness contrasted with the symptoms of ill humor which D'Artagnan had just remarked. "You have today acquired eternal rights to my gratitude."

Lord de Winter went to a table upon which was a salver with Spanish wine and glasses. He filled two and by a sign invited D'Artagnan to drink.

D'Artagnan knew it was considered disoblging by an Englishman to refuse to pledge him, therefore drew near to the table and took the second glass. He did not, however, lose sight of milady, and in a mirror perceived ried a younger brother of the family who had left her a widow with one child. This child was the only heir to Lord de Winter if Lord de Winter did not marry.

In addition to this, after half an hour's conversation, D'Artagnan was convinced that milady was his compatriot; she spoke French with an elegance and a purity that left no doubt on that head.

D'Artagnan was profuse in gallant speeches and protestations of devotedness. "To all the simple things which escaped our Gascon, milady replied with a smile of kindness. The hour for retiring arrived. D'Artagnan took leave of milady and left the salon the happiest of men.

Upon the stairs he met Kitty, the pretty maid, who brushed against him as she passed, and then, blushing to the eyes, asked his pardon for having touched him, in a voice so sweet and with so kind an expression that the pardon was granted instantly.

D'Artagnan came again on the morrow and was still better received than on the day before. Lord de Winter was not at home. Milady asked D'Artagnan whence he came, who were his friends and whether he had not at some times thought of attaching himself to M. le Cardinal.

D'Artagnan, who, as we have said, was exceedingly prudent for a young man of twenty, then remembered his suspicions regarding milady. He launched into a eulogy of his eminence and said that he should not have failed to enter into the guard of the cardinal instead of the king's guards if he had happened to know M. de Cavois instead of M. de Treville.

Milady changed the conversation without any appearance of affectation and asked D'Artagnan in the most careless manner possible, if he had ever been in England.

D'Artagnan replied that he had been sent thither by M. de Treville to treat for a number of horses and that he had brought back four as specimens.

Milady, in the courses of her conversation twice or thrice bit her lips. She had to deal with a Gascon who played close.

CHAPTER XXV. A Lawyer's Dinner.

HOWEVER brilliant had been the part played by Porthos in the duel, it had not made him forget the dinner with the lawyer's wife.

On the morrow he received the last polishing brush from the hands of Mousqueton and took his way toward the Rue aux Ours, with the step of a man who was doubly in favor with fortune.

He was about to see in reality a certain coffer, of which he had twenty times beheld the image in his dreams.

And yet at the very door the musketeer began to entertain some doubts. The approach was not such as to possess people. An ill smelling, dark passage, a staircase half lighted.

Porthos knocked with his finger. A tall, pale clerk, with a face shaded by a forest of unclipped hair, opened the door and bowed with the air of a man in a corner town, a piece of magnificence which caused the eyes of the usual guests to dilate in a manner that threatened injury to them.

"One may see that you love your family, Mme. Coquenard," said her husband, with a smile that was almost tragic. "You are certainly treating your cousin very handsomely."

The poor fowl was thin and covered with one of those thick bristly skins through which the teeth cannot penetrate with all their efforts.

"Well," thought Porthos, "this is poor work! I respect old age, but I don't think much of it boiled or roasted."

Mme. Coquenard drew the dish toward her, skillfully detached the two great black feet, which she placed upon her husband's plate; cut off the neck, which with the head she put on one side for herself; raised the wing for Porthos and then returned to the servant who had brought it in the animal, otherwise intact and which had disappeared before the musketeer had had time to examine the variations which disappointment produces upon faces according to the characters and temperaments of those who experience it.

In the place of the fowl a dish of haricot beans made its appearance—an enormous dish, in which some bones of mutton which at first sight might have been supposed to have some meat on them, pretended to show themselves.

Mme. Coquenard distributed this dish to the young men with the moderation of a good housewife.

The time for taking wine was come. Master Coquenard poured from a very small stone bottle the third of a glass to each of the young men, served himself in about the same proportion and passed the bottle to Porthos and Mme. Coquenard.

The young men filled up their third or a glass with water; then when they had drunk half the glass they filled it up again and continued to do so, which brought them by the end of the repast to the swallowing of a drink which, from the color of the ruby, had passed to that of a pale topaz.

Porthos ate his wing of the fowl very timidly. He also drank half a glass of this sparingly served wine and found it to be nothing but that horrible Montreuil, the terror of all practiced palates.

Master Coquenard saw him swallowing this wine undiluted and sighed deeply.

"Will you eat any of these beans, Cousin Porthos?" said Mme. Coquenard in that tone which says, "Take my advice; don't touch them."

"Thank you, my dear cousin, I have no more appetite."

A general silence prevailed. Porthos was quite at a loss. The procureur repeated several times:

"Ah, Mme. Coquenard, accept my compliments. Your dinner has been a real feast. Lord, how I have eaten!"

Queen Had Confidence In Him.

Queen Victoria showed her confidence in Sir Dighton Probyn by appointing him Keeper of her Privy Purse. He was also Comptroller and Treasurer to the late King Edward, when Prince of Wales. On the accession of the present King, Sir Dighton, in accordance with a special desire, attached himself to Queen Alexandra, and is always in attendance on her on state occasions. Few men can boast of such a record of service, and were the venerable courtier to write the story of his "Life" it would prove one of the most interesting documents on record.

Hanged For a Trifle.

It is almost impossible to hang a woman in Anglo-Saxon countries today, but in old time England this was not the case. King George III. once offered twenty-three women offenders an alternative to hanging. They might, should they choose, be transported instead. Six of them voted for hanging. Many women were then hanged for far less crimes than window-smashing.

Earls as Chief Magistrates.

The acceptance by the Earl of Derby of the mayoralty of Liverpool reminds us that titled chief magistrates have been more frequent than is generally supposed. Thus, there will be a wearer of the strawberry leaves among the mayors for the ensuing year in the person of the Duke of Devonshire, who will administer justice in Chesterfield.

The Duke of Norfolk seems to have taken kindly to the office, for he has occupied the chief magisterial chair in Sheffield, Arundel, and Westminster; while another ducal mayor was his grace of Bedford, who enjoyed civic honors in Holborn; and a still further example was the Duke of Marlborough, who was Woodstock's mayor for two years in succession. Both the late and present Marquess of Bute have been mayors of Cardiff, while the Earls of Burham, Warwick, Lonsdale, Plymouth, Dudley, Shaftesbury, and St. Leven have all been chief magistrates at some time or other.

Compensation Curiosities.

All sorts of funny claims are made under the English Workmen's Compensation Act, and a journalist who has made inquiries of some of the leading companies who insure under the Act has discovered some droll instances. Here are a few:

A cow, whisking her tail, causes severe injury to milkmaid's eye.

A servant receives shock through seeing a large Teddy bear when the room was dimly lighted.

A manservant strains his leg through stamping on a cat.

A cook, breaking coal, a piece went down her throat.

A curate scalded through stumbling whilst carrying a tea-urn at a parochial gathering.

A clergyman bitten by a dog whilst visiting.

A coachman, proceeding from a stable, struck on the face by his master's slipper, intended for a "singing" cat.

A London Garden.

Perhaps the greatest triumph of London gardening is achieved by a woman who has her salad and vegetables, with a few flowers, all the year round from the back garden which most people would devote to a catwalk in despair. She produces lettuce and tomatoes and celery in due season, together with eggs (for the fowls can peck and lay), and she is thinking of growing grapes and making her own wine. This is all in a back garden in the King's Road—the business end of it, close to the Chelsea Town Hall.

Quill pens came into use in 553; the first steel ones in 1820, when the first gross of them sold for $36.

Two Famous Horses.

Flying Childers, bred in 1715, by the Duke of Devonshire, was considered by sportsmen to be the fastest horse that was ever bred in the world. He ran four miles in six minutes and 48 seconds, as a rate of thirty-five miles an hour. Eclipse was the fleetest horse that ran in England since the time of Childers. He was never beaten and died in February, 1789, aged twenty-five years. His heart weighed fourteen pounds, which was said to account for his wonderful spirit and courage.

Bible Printed In "Pidgeon English."

The Bible has been published in "Pidgeon English." Here are two specimen verses from the 23rd Psalm as it is read to certain natives of West Africa: "He maketh me to recumb on the verdant lawns. He leadeth me beside the unrippled liquidities. He restoreth my spirit. He conducteth me in the avenues of restitution for the celebrity of his appellations."

Privilege of a Prince.

The Prince of Wales enjoys peculiar prerogatives. Among these is the advantage of a special statute of limitations. While other debtors only escape from liability after six years have elapsed, the prince is able to snap his fingers at a tradesman who sends in a bill more than ten days after the expiration of the quarter in which the obligation was incurred.

Every Syllable.

There are many stories to pronunciation of certain names, that of Cholmondeley pronounced Chumley, generally place in the list. A story Lord Cholmondeley gives a reason for irregularity in titles.

Lord Cholmondeley was leaving his own house, when he encountered a stranger, who, being his lordship by sight, if Lord Cholmondeley, pronounced each syllable distinctly, with "No," replied the peer, with hesitation, "nor any of his."

DOES YOUR SOIL NEED LIME?

Best Way to Find Out Is to Make Test
by Means of Clover.

Lime, considered as the source of the element calcium, is one of the ten absolutely essential plant foods. As such it is required in only small amounts and it is probable that nearly all soils contain enough to satisfy the direct needs of the plant, says a circular of the Purdue university, Indiana, agricultural experiment station.

The one best way to tell whether or not the soil needs lime is to try it and see, and the place to try it is on the clover crop. A good plan is to apply ground limestone at the rate of two tons per acre and harrow in before sowing wheat, and in the spring sow clover as usual. The clover may fail because of shortage of plant food or bad physical condition of the soil even on the limed land, so it is best to use a light application of manure in connec-

When alfalfa or clover hay is stored in the barn it will be easy to gather a quantity of the leaves that shatter off, and these are prime feed for all classes of poultry.

Dry feed has no place in the duck diet. Four parts wheat bran, one part cornmeal and enough low grade flour added to bind the mass without making it pasty, about 5 per cent sharp grit moistened with just enough water to be crumbly, is a good ration.
After the first few days a little soaked beef scrap may be added, though not necessary if the feed is moistened with milk.

Scaly legs in fowls are caused by a mite which finds its way under the scale and causes the legs to become diseased, rough and painful. These mites cannot survive grease or oil.
The remedy is the application of either. Kerosene will have the effect of destroying the natural color of the legs. The use of lard, meat fryings or vaseline will do the work.—Kansas

The illustration herewith is a simple device to keep a cow from kicking.
It consists of two pieces of rope about four and one-half feet long and a piece of an old fork handle across the cow's back. Insert an eyebolt in the floor to the left of the cow about halfway up toward the feed box, then fasten your piece of rope in this ring and to the fork handle just about the height of the cow's back. Fix the other side low room for milking operations. This apparatus is left fastened on the left hand side and thrown back across the partition when not in use.

Just before milking the cow is fastened in the stanchion, and this is thrown across and fastened in the ring on the right hand side. This is especially good for the cow that is in the habit of putting her foot in the milk pail. She cannot raise her foot without bowing her back somewhat, which this prevents. And if she persists in doing this trick tighten up the rope on the right hand side. The object in fastening it to the floor is that it gives her a certain amount of freedom, and if she moves backward and forward it tightens. After a time the

ARISTOCRATIC MENIALS.

An Archbishop Making Soup For the King.

Many of Britain's leading aristocratic families inherit not only wealth and position, but—what many of them seem to value almost as much—the right to perform various menial services for the reigning King.

For example, the comparatively simple function of washing the royal hands is, on the occasion of a coronation banquet, shared between two gentlemen of high degree. The lord of the manor of Haydon first receives a gilt basin, ewer, and towel from the Officer of the Jewel House. He then pours the water over the King's hands, while the lord of the manor of Worksop stands in waiting with a towel.

Most of these hereditary offices are connected with the banquet, at nearly every stage, of which some noble or other has a special menial service to perform. This is true even of the earlier stages—the cooking; for no less exalted a personage than the Archbishop of Canterbury himself can be legally called upon to make soup with his own hands for the Sovereign's consumption.

[Larger heap shows clover grown on limed soil; smaller, clover grown on unlimed soil.]

tion with the lime on a part of the limed strip. In case there is a stand of clover on both limed and unlimed land, the two areas should be harvested and weighed separately to determine whether or not the lime has made sufficient gain to justify its use.

Acids turn blue litmus paper red, and this test has been recommended for soil acidity, but we do not regard it as entirely satisfactory. However, for the information of those who may wish to try it, we give the following directions: Place a strip of blue litmus paper between two wider strips of filter paper, break open a moist clod, place one end of the strips of paper in the fracture and press the clod firmly together. In about ten minutes remove the litmus paper and pin it up to dry by the end which was left out of the soil. A change to pink or red which lasts after the paper is dry indicates acid. Do not handle the end of the paper used for testing or allow anything to touch it. Repeat the test with different samples, and if doubtful test the subsoil, which is generally more acid than the surface soil. Blue litmus paper and filter paper can be bought at any drug store.

GOOD ADVICE.

Jock, when ye hae naething else to do ye may be aye sticking in a tree; it will be growing. Jock, when ye're sleeping.—From "The Heart of Midlothian," by Sir Walter Scott.

Cash From Waste.

As soon as possible after the small grain is harvested turn the stock into the fields to glean the waste grain and clean up the fence rows. A part of the money the land has produced still remains in the field after the grain has been harvested and removed. Animals can make available cash out of the waste crops.

Get It on the Land.

There is no month in the year when manure cannot be hauled and scattered on the fields to advantage. It is better on the land than in the stables and lots.

With the Feathered Folk.

Lack of grit, overfeeding and idleness cause liver trouble.

rope on the right hand side. The object in fastening it to the door is that it gives her a certain amount of freedom, and if she moves backward and forward it tightens. After a time the cow gets accustomed to this, and if it is simply laid across her back she will not move a foot. I have used this in a number of bad cases and found it works to perfection, says a correspondent of the American Agriculturist.

FARM BUTTERMAKING.

No Reason Why It Should Not Beat Creamery Product in Price.

Butter made from a single herd of cows in a small dairy located on the farm, says a Washington state bulletin, should command the highest price of any butter on the market.

The first essential in making good butter is good cream. To get this simply means to take ordinary precautions regarding clean cows and barn, clean attendants and clean utensils and then cooling the cream at once after separating, either by running it over a cooler or by setting it in running cold water and stirring. Cream should not be stored with any substance having an aroma. Sweet cream churns hard and gives a butter having a flat taste. To sour or ripen the cream, first heat it to about 70 degrees F. (use a thermometer) and let it stand until it has a mild but distinctly acid taste, or, second, add some sour milk or buttermilk (starter) to start the ripening, at the same time holding it at 70 degrees. The best cream for churning is that which tests about 30 per cent fat after starter has been added.

The temperature at which the cream should be churned depends on the size of fat globules, hardness of fat globules, age of the cream, percentage of fat in the cream, kind of feed the cow is getting, and this cannot be determined except by trial. Thirty-five degrees may be proper on one farm and 80 degrees on the one adjoining. A good rule to follow is to have the butter come about the size of wheat kernels in about thirty or forty minutes.

While the granules are about the size of wheat the buttermilk should be drained, the granules washed and the salt added. Then they are worked together, only enough to distribute the salt evenly. When the churn is not stopped until the granules become large some of the buttermilk is incased, and it makes butter of poor keeping quality.

Mottles in the butter are caused by an uneven distribution of salt in the presence of buttermilk.

The Worst Case.

"The worst case of mixed metaphor known," said a teacher of English at the University of Pennsylvania, "was the output of Sir Ellis Ashmead Bartlett. Sir Ellis once wrote to The London Times:

"The concert of the powers in China is a mere delusive screen, agreeable in sound, very tickling to the ignorant ear, calculated to draw the cheers of the groundlings, but which really serves only as a blind to ourselves, as a cover for ministerial inaction, as a sounding board to tell our foes of our plans, and as a lever wherewith they are enabled to checkmate our policy."

"Imagine," ended the instructor—"imagine a screen doing all that!"

Archbishop of Canterbury himself can be legally called upon to make soup with his own hands for the Sovereign's consumption.

The taking of wine, which in olden days was always accompanied by a certain amount of ceremony amongst the nobility and gentry, naturally affords a wide field for these honorary services.

Thus it is the task of the Duke of Norfolk, as Hereditary Lord Chief Butler, to see that the wine is properly decanted. He has no fewer than thirteen assistants for this, consisting of the Lord Mayor and twelve citizens of London, who have also the right to approach the King after the second course, and offer wine in a gold cup. Further, these thirteen assistants have nine sub-assistants in the persons of the Mayor of Oxford and eight burgesses of that city.

The number of persons who have the right to offer wine to the King during a banquet is an interesting reminder of the "hard-drinking" days. The Duke of Argyll, the Earl of Verulam, and Lord de Ros each have separate duties connected with the pouring out and offering of wine.

The average man is sometimes apt to regard these rights and duties as rather childish, but it must not be forgotten that they are all rooted in some serious purpose. Most of them date from a time when the power of the nobles was becoming a menace to the peace and safety of the country. The King would then pick out a particular baron who had recently manifested signs of "uppishness" to the crown, and, in the presence of a large assembly, confer on him the "privilege" of performing this or that task.

To-day many of these strange duties have been dropped; for example, the present Primate has not as yet been called upon by King George to display his culinary powers. Nor have the Earls of Abingdon and Verulam, with the Marquess of Breadalbane, been observed carving hot joints.

The matter of non-resident children attending Napanee Public Schools has been before the Napanee school board on several occasions, but that august body seems very reluctant to deal with the matter in any way. There are nearly fifty of these pupils sufficient to fill one room in the school and the ratepayers of Napanee supply teachers, buildings, light, heat and everything necessary and receive—nil. At the last meeting of the close corporation known as the Napanee Board of Education it was moved by Mr. S. R. Miller and seconded by Mr. F. W. F. SIMMONS, - - Napanee, Ont.

Klein has in this play written an even more virile and vital contribution to dramatic literature than he did in "The Lion and the Mouse." The scenes are laid in New York and deal with a certain condition of social life in which society leaders, both male and female, are the central figures. In working out the story, the author attacks the method used to pick out those entitled to social preferment, the distinction accorded only by heritage and birth. This play marks a step forward in the evolution of the drama, the tendency of which is to deal with conditions that exist and which by reason of the public apathy, are allowed to continue. Playgoers will find much to interest them in "The Third Degree," and undoubtedly it will mark an epoch in the theatrical history of the town.

Grand Opera House, Kingston.

Much interest has been aroused during the past two years by the production of a play in New York bearing the strange title, "Every woman." The newspapers and the magazines have devoted columns of discussion to this dramatic novelty which is labeled a dramatic spectacle. Added prominence was given to "Every woman" from the fact that its author, Walter Browne, a New York newspaper man, who had labored upon it for years, died upon the morning of the day of the first performance of his play which would have realized for him the ambition of a lifetime. Every woman made an instantaneous success. It ran continuously in New York for nearly two years, has since been translated in other languages, and only recently has made a sensational success in London at the historic Drury Lane Theatre. Browne's widow and her children who were left penniless, have been made affluent by the success of Everywoman. Over three millions of people have already witnessed the performance. Henry W. Savage is bringing the original New York production and cast to the Grand Opera House, Kingston, for two nights, Monday and Tuesday, October 21 and 22. The company is undoubtedly the largest organization in the dramatic and musical fields which has ever been toured. It consists of over one hundred and fifty people. There are really three separate organizations, viz: grand opera, light opera and drama. The work is of such a character that it requires artists of the first class to give a creditable performance, such as Mr. Savage always assures his patrons. It is said that Everywoman represents an expenditure of over sixty thousand dollars. There are thirty-seven speaking characters in the spectacle, and to properly interpret the musical score a symphony orchestra is carried by the organization. There are many scenic splendors, one of the most startling of which is a representation of Broadway, New York, at midnight on New Year's eve, with all the frolic with which the metropolis celebrates the passing away of the old year and welcomes the coming of the new. It is a triumph of stage-craft. The cast of Everywoman is headed by H. Cooper Cliffe, a distinguished English actor, who visited America twice as leading support for Sir Henry Irving.

Why not Install Electric Light- ing in your place THIS FALL instead of putting it off again.

It is worth all you pay each month for convenience and safety alone, say nothing of the light you get.

Let us quote you a price on wiring your house. You can pay for the wiring by the month if you wish.
